Late-Night Ferry Running Empty

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

If the late ferry experiment ended now it would have to be labelled a disaster — but it's not going to end now.

"We're going to give it every chance to succeed," B.C. Ferries traffic manager Ken Stratford said Friday.

"We're going to let as many people as possible know about this service. The experiment will continue, as scheduled, until Sept. 6."

The early returns are discouraging.

In July the midnight sailing from Tsawwassen had an average load of 27 per cent capacity for vehicles and 14 per cent capacity for passengers.

There's worse. In order to make the midnight trip feasible, there is a 10:15 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay.

It doesn't sail empty — but almost. In July its average load was two per cent of capacity for vehicles and about one per cent for passengers.

The ferry on the late runs is the Queen of Tsawwassen. It is full-size but not a stretch ferry. When full it carries 138 cars and a maximum of 809 passengers.

On the midnight run it has been averaging 29 cars, one bus, two commercial vehicles and six campers; plus 114 passengers.

On the 10:15 p.m. run from Swartz Bay, the average load is two cars, one bus, 14 passengers, one-eleventh of a commercial vehicle and two-elevenths of a camper.

"Part of the problem is that people are not yet fully aware of the service, Stratford said."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice-president Bob Wheaton agrees there must be more publicity about the route if the experiment is to succeed.

The chamber will be publicizing both the 10:15 p.m. run and the midnight sailing.

"This service is of particular interest to businessmen and we will be doing what we can to publicize it in the business community."

Meanwhile, Stratford said B.C. Ferries Corp. has contacted major sport organizations in Vancouver, including the B.C. Lions and the Whitecaps, so they can organize fan bus trips to the games.

"They can easily make the midnight sailing after the game."

H-Program Test Limit Five Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's compulsory heroin treatment program will be abandoned after five years if it does not work, Health Minister Bob McClelland says in an article in the Journal of the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario.

"I don't intend to pour money down a bottomless hole," he said. "We'll admit failure if we fail, but I don't think we will.

"We consider this to be a five-year demonstration project, and if we find out at the end of that time that the program isn't working, we'll scrap it and do something different."

Under the Heroin Treatment Act, given third reading last month, addicts can be committed to a three-year treatment program including, in some cases, six month terms of incarceration in a treatment facility.

U.S. TALKING TRADE-OFF

Swap: 2 Spies For Shcharansky?

Times News Services

BONN — The United States is considering a swap involving Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky and two Soviet officials being held in the United States on charges of espionage, administration officials said today.

To emphasize U.S. opposition to the 13-year sentence imposed on Shcharansky for allegedly spying for the United States, the administration is also considering economic sanctions against the Soviet Union, the officials said.

U.S. officials said negotiations were in a "delicate state" and no details could be divulged.

Soviet officials in Geneva had told newsmen the Kremlin was interested in securing the release of two U.N. employees of Soviet nationality who are being held in New Jersey on spying charges.

Meanwhile, Shcharansky's conviction provoked a rush of indignation in the Western world Friday.

President Carter, in West Germany for an seven-state economic conference, denounced the prosecution of dissidents. He linked the future of U.S.-Soviet detente to Moscow's respect for human rights.

He said the sentence given to Shcharansky has produced a "sadness the whole world feels."

In the U.S. Congress, there were calls for assorted responses, ranging from trade sanctions against the Soviet Union to U.S. withdrawal from the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Various human rights groups also reacted bitterly, while Communist parties in Britain and Italy denounced the Soviets' trials of dissidents. Switzerland offered blanket asylum to convicted Soviet activists.

But along with the wave of revulsion expressed by one group after another was a sense of frustration that not much could be done to alter the Soviet Union's treatment of its critics and political dissenters.

The human dimension of the plight of Shcharansky, 30, a computer expert sentenced to 13 years at hard labor, was dramatized by his wife, Avital, moments after she landed at Dulles Airport.

When she learned of the sentence just after her arrival on a flight from Paris, she nearly burst into tears.

"Thirteen years in the Russian jails is much too much to expect," she said. "Fifteen days can kill a person. And even 15 days is too much for a prisoner who is not guilty."

And members of Shcharansky's family were pledged to continue fighting and protesting, his brother-in-law said Friday after hearing of the sentence to 13 years in prison.

CARTER GIVES BERLIN PLEDGE

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Welcomed by thousands of Berliners, President Carter peered today across a freshly-painted section of the Communist-built wall that divides this city after declaring that "no matter what happens, Berlin will stay free."

Carter stood on a temporary platform looking through binoculars at a no-man's land of tank traps, barbed wire and guardhouses. The point where he stood normally is daubed on its western side with political slogans and other graffiti.

West Berliners said Easterners climbed over it Friday night and, remaining in a section of East Berlin territory that extends several feet beyond the wall toward the west, painted the ugly barrier a cool, clean white for about 50 metres yards in each direction.

The president said of the action: "I don't think anything can hide the basic deprivation of human rights exemplified by the wall."

Carter came close to echoing John F. Kennedy, who 15 years ago electrified a vast throng in front of West Berlin's city hall by shouting, "Ich bin ein Berliner" — I am a Berliner.

Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt started a day of jet-hopping in Bonn, flew to Frankfurt, visited nearby Wiesbaden, and then flew here, parallelling the route taken by Kennedy.

In his text for a speech to before West German and American troops at Wiesbaden, Carter said:

"You are the point of the Western sword. That sword is sharp and true, and the people and government of the United States are striving to keep it that way."

Carter also told a hand-picked audience of Berliners today that the United States would consider an attack on Western Europe the same as an attack on the United States itself:

"We do have an adequate defence and it is increasing," he told the town hall meeting broadcast live to the U.S.

"We consider an attack on the German people or Western European territory exactly the same as an attack on the people or territory of the United States."

Salmon Halt Begins

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fishermen belonging to the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union have been asked to stop fishing in preparation for a strike by 4,000 shoreworkers at noon Sunday.

The fishermen were to stop fishing at midnight Friday.

The decision to close down the industry comes at the peak of the salmon season and UFAWU secretary-treasurer George Hewison said Friday that a strike will cost the industry about $20 million a week.

He announced that the shoreworkers, also members of the UFAWU, rejected the latest Fisheries Association of British Columbia wage offer by a 82-per-cent margin during a series of meetings at points along the coast. Earlier they had voted 75 per cent in favor of a strike.

"I've never seen a year like this," Hewison said. "We've had no fewer than 10 study sessions in the last week."

Hewison said 900 workers at Port Edwards near Prince Rupert were already off the job.

"We're having trouble keeping our people on the job until the deadline Sunday."

He pledged that all "fair-caught" fish delivered before noon Sunday will be processed by the shoreworkers before they strike.

About 600 tendermen, who work on the packing ships, are already in port, either Vancouver or Prince Rupert, to vote on the industry's wage offer. The union urged the members to reject the proposed $6.78-a-day increase in wages.

Hewision said the shoreworker strike will be called off if the companies come up with "an acceptable offer." The shoreworkers have been offered a 55-cent-an-hour increase on rates of $6.72 at base, $7.37 for production workers in canneries, $7.59 in cold storage plants and $8.89 for tradesmen.

The union is seeking a $12.50-a-day increase for tendermen and a 85-cent-an-hour increase for the shoreworkers. The companies' offers amount to about 7.5 per cent over one year.

WOODCHOPPERS BALL was in full swing — without benefit of Woody Herman music — at Sooke River flats this morning when loggers prepared the raw material for the chopping events at All-Sooke Day this afternoon. The event, which had its rain-free record drenched last year, made a fine recovery as sun shone brightly on what appeared to be another record crowd gathering for the fun. (John McKay photo).

PIPELINE FOR BEER?

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Tavern owner John Hall has a plan to help relieve the beer shortage in British Columbia, where drinkers are drier than usual during the second month of a strike-lockout in the brewery industry.

Hall, who runs the Salty Dog Tavern here, has suggested building a refrigerated beer pipeline from Port Angeles to Milwaukee, Wis., one of the centres of the United States brewing industry.

Hall is active in a group to keep a similar pipeline proposal—but for oil not beer—from being built. The oil pipeline is being proposed by Northern Tier Pipeline Co.

The tavern owner wants to call his project the Northern Beer Pipeline. He said it would terminate in Port Angeles, where a keg farm and suds port would be constructed.

At the suds port, the brew would be loaded aboard super tankards—noted for their deep draft—and hauled to British Columbia.

Hall said environmentalists are complaining about his heady idea, fearing that no one would report beer spills. He said, however, says there is no cause for worry because spills would not damage marine life except, perhaps, for a few pickled herrings.

Pregnancy No Excuse - Vander Z

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday he will overturn an arbitration board ruling that allowed two 17-year-old pregnant girls in Kelowna to collect welfare.

Vander Zalm said in an interview that pregnancy is no excuse to be excluded from his ministry's recently-formulated regulations making it more difficult for persons aged 16 to 18 to receive social assistance.

The minister said if he allowed the board's ruling to stand it would become a precedent.

The board said Thursday the girls were entitled to social assistance in spite of the Vander Zalm's edict that such teen-agers should only be allowed welfare in emergency situations.

Vander Zalm said his decision may sound harsh, but the intent of the new regulations must be enforced.

Stop: It's Good French

MONTREAL (CP) — The Office de la Langue Francaise, responsible for promoting the use of French in the province, says Quebec's 215,000 bilingual "stop-arret" signs should become just plain old stop signs.

And although it may come as news to English-speaking Quebecers and tourists, it's all in the interest of preserving the purity of the French language.

After some linguistic investigation, the language office says stop is good French while arret, used as a verb in the imperative, is bad grammar.

Although both terms are "acceptable," spokesman Lise Trudel said Friday, stop is used worldwide and is more correct.

As early as 1878, she noted, the Dictionnaire de la Langue Francaise listed the verb stopper as meaning "to command one to stop."

Transport Minister Lucien Lessard has yet to rule whether "stop," "arret," "stop-arret," or just a red octagon with a hand gesturing halt, should adorn Quebec highways.

Lessard's verdict will directly affect 15,000 signs on 40,000 miles of provincial highways, but municipalities, which also erect the signs, would be encouraged to follow suit.

Guerrillas Slay 17 Villagers

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Black nationalist guerrillas burned an entire village to the ground Friday, killing 17 of the 22 residents, including three babies, a Rhodesian military communique said today.

Guerrillas shot five villagers and then herded another 17 into a hut before riddling it with bullets. Twelve of those in the hut were killed, the military command said.

One survivor was hospitalized in critical condition, a military spokesman said.

It was the third mass killing of civilians blamed on guerrillas in the past three weeks.

Chirau's large family, including his three wives, live in the Zwimba reservation in a fortified brick compound defended by black militiamen.

Two black Rhodesian guerrilla armies are fighting a six-year-old war to unseat the government, which comprises black and white leaders who reached a constitutional settlement four months ago promising majority rule by the beginning of next year. Guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe were excluded from the agreement and have pledged to step up the war.

Charlottes 'Hotspot' of Public Opinion

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The B.C. ministry of forests has been advised to dispatch a special study team to the Queen Charlotte Islands to head off a public uproar that could become bigger than the spruce budworm controversy.

A specially-commissioned report that deals with the ministry's communications problems warns that the situation now developing on the Charlottes — apparently concerning the South Moresby Island wilderness proposal — could lead to a public outcry unless the ministry acts fast.

The ministry is faced with the difficult task of approving cutting plans for tree farm licences which now exist in the unique South Moresby Island area. Numerous groups are calling for the preservation of the area.

The report, which reviews the ministry's communications program from top to bottom and recommends a spate of changes, says the Charlottes deserve special attention.

It recommends that a commission of inquiry be dispatched to the Islands to investigate the situation, meet with special interest groups, take the testimony of experts and propose a public participation program.

"The ministry is not dealing with the situation on the Islands, which shows every sign of developing in a cause celebre. In the opinion of this report, the Queen Charlottes is worthy of special study because it could become the biggest single public relations crisis this ministry has ever faced."

The report, compiled by a Victoria-based marketing and communications firm, indicates ministry officials have a lack of respect for its critics on the Charlottes stating that "personnel refer to the opposition as hippies and even draft-dodgers. Remarked one: 'If they couldn't deal with their problems in the U.S., why should we deal with them up here?' "

The report cautions ministry officials that people on the Charlottes are not always what they seem.

"The Queen Charlottes have attracted many dissatisfied but articulate young people. As one person remarked, 'You can never tell who you are talking to. The long-haired guy sitting opposite you may turn out to be a nuclear physicist.' "

The report warns that the ministry can get itself into trouble on the Charlottes because the issue is becoming of interest throughout the province.

$50M in Union Dues Go to U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trade unions based in the United States make about $50 million a year on dues collected from Canadian members, a spokesman for the independent Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers (CAIMAW) said Friday.

"American unions and multi-national corporations have at least one thing in common," said Jess Succamore, CAIMAW national secretary-treasurer. "They both exploit Canada as a profitable branch plant of their U.S. operation."

Statistics Canada figures show that in 1976 international unions received $84,136,000 in Canadian dues and spent $34,004,000 on salaries, strikes, pension and welfare benefits in Canada. The information was released this week in a report based on the Corporation and Labor Unions Return Act (CALURA).

Succamore said the international union system is "a money-making machine and the Canadian workers are paying for it."

Larry Widen, Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) regional representative, said CALURA's figures were "inaccurate and untruthful" and did not take services returned to Canada by the unions into account.

"I'm sure if there was an accurate accounting, the reverse would be true because there's more strike benefits paid out in Canada than the U.S.," Widen said.

"I know, for example, that there are international representatives that work half the time in Canada and half the time in the U.S. that are not taken into account."

About 55 per cent of the CLC's two million members are members of international unions.

QUE. TO TAKE PART?

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec is willing to participate in constitutional talks planned for the fall, Premier Rene Levesque said Friday in a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau.

But the Quebec premier added that he has previous commitments early in September when Trudeau has suggested that the talks between the federal government and representatives of the provinces begin.

Trudeau decided that the federal-provincial meeting would begin Sept. 11, after consulting the other provinces but failing to discuss the date with Quebec, the letter says.

Levesque would prefer to meet with Trudeau and the other premiers after the second week in October, when the Quebec national assembly resumes sitting.

The premier said Claude Morin, his intergovernmental affairs minister, would be willing to meet with federal officials to work out an agreement on a suitable date.

He notes that his Parti Quebecois government was elected after it promised to hold a referendum on the "replacing of the existing federal regime by new constitutional arrangements."

The national assembly recently passed a law setting up the framework to allow that referendum, Levesque said, and "it is in this context that your government has decided once again to begin discussions on constitutional reform."

Test-Tube Baby Bomb Threat Hoax

OLDHAM, England (AP) — The woman who is expecting a test-tube baby had to be evacuated from her hospital ward Friday because of a bomb hoax.

Police said Lesley Brown, 32, of Bristol, was one of 60 women patients transferred to other parts of the hospital.

Mrs. Brown is expecting her baby within the next few weeks. British medical authorities say that if the baby is born safe and well, it will be the first authenticated birth of a test-tube baby.

A man telephoned the hospital and two newspaper offices and said there was a bomb in the maternity unit. Police and firemen found no explosives.

Patients were moved back to their beds three hours later.

Mrs. Brown's gynecologist, Patrick Steptoe, a pioneer in test-tube baby research, was in the hospital at the time.

Associated Newspapers, which owns the London Daily Mail, is said to have paid the Browns $617,500 for world syndication rights to their story.

Mrs. Brown's husband, John, a 38-year-old railway worker, is staying here.

A successful birth would complete more than 10 years' work by Steptoe and his colleague, Dr. Robert Edwards, a Cambridge University physiologist, in pioneering the test-tube technique.

WATER TAXI OVERLOADED?

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A water taxi under contract to the British Columbia government and licensed to carry 30 passengers sailed from Horseshoe Bay Friday with about 60 persons on board, a former National Harbors Board official said.

Bill Rathie, who is also a former mayor of Vancouver, said there were only 36 life jackets on The Price, a 12-metre boat under contract to the B.C. Ferry Corporation to ferry passengers from the mainland to Bowen Island, about 12 kilometres away.

Dick Roberts, a B.C. Ferry spokesman, said the owners of The Price, Mercury Marine Services Ltd., were responsible for loading the passengers.

Mercury Marine manager Frank Wright said it would have been impossible to have 60 people on board and that he had left instructions with the crew not to overload The Price.

Rathie said he will ask Transport Canada to hold an inquiry and press for criminal charges.

The Price was brought into service Friday after regular ferry service was cancelled for 10 days as a result of damage to the ferry dock at Bowen Island.

Big Win For Wife Of Jobless

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver woman whose husband has been out of work for the past year has won $100,000 in the Winsday lottery.

Rosita Gutierrez said the winnings will help with payments on the family's house while her husband, Cristino, searches for a job.

Gerald McEarchern of nearby Surrey also won $100,000.

Another Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — City telephone and power workers went on strike Friday, adding heat to the summer of labor discontent that has affected nurses, CBC technicians and construction unions.

Supervisory personnel took over essential services from 1,700 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), Local 1007, who work at Edmonton Telephones and the city's Clover Bar and Rossdale power generating plants.

Emergency power service was still available to city residents but new electrical and telephone installations were to be curtailed.

Talks between the IBEW and the city broke off about noon Friday. Union spokesmen said the workers will remain off the job for at least the weekend.

There also has been little progress reported in the strike of federal nurses at the Charles Camsell Hospital who walked off the job Thursday.

The 3,000 members of the Northern Plumbers and Pipefitters union plan to go on strike Monday and the 100-member millwright union is already on strike.

CBC technicians, who are in a legal position to strike, met with management Friday and talks were to resume Sunday.

Information Right Upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board ruled Friday that unions don't have "a lock on the minds" of their members.

After a four-month dispute between the B.C. Sugar Refining Co. Ltd. and Local 517 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, LRB chairman Paul Weiler granted employers the right to inform employees directly of developments during labor-management negotiations.

In the fight, which led to a breakdown in contract talks three weeks ago, the union bargaining team repeatedly asked the company not to post notices informing employees of negotiations, arguing that these were jeopardizing the union's position.

The company said the policy was to cover poor communication in the union which provoked a strike in 1975 and 1976.

Weiler ruled such notices would be illegal only if they jeopardized the union's position, but in this case, he said, "the most striking fact about them is that they make terribly dull reading."

He said whether or not such a policy is a sensible idea is another matter, but the "ultimate freedom lies with the employees."

He also ordered the union back to the bargaining table. A contract to replace one expired Feb. 28 is being negotiated.

Grid Project Head Named

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Finance Minister Donald Craik today announced that Winnipeg engineering consultant Gordon Spafford has been named project manager for a study of a western Canadian electrical grid.

Craik made the announcement on behalf of an ad hoc committee consisting of himself, B. C. Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, Alberta Utilities Minister A. A. Warrack and Saskatchewan Resources Minister Jack Messer.

A series of fairly minor frontal impulses will continue to move across the Gulf of Alaska bringing periodic light rain or drizzle to the north coast. These systems will weaken further as they arc inland across the northern Interior and then southward along the Rocky Mountains. Most Interior locations will experience an increase in afternoon cloudiness and the development of isolated thundershowers over the weekend. There is a centre of instability just off the Washington coast which remains somewhat of a threat for the southwestern corner of B.C. Present indications however point to only bands of fairly high cloud swinging across the extreme southern sections of bc this weekend. Temperatures in most regions will tend to be a trifle lower than on Friday.

ENVIRONMENT CANADA WEATHER OFFICE 10 A.M. FORECASTS Valid Until Midnight Sunday

FUGITIVE MIGHT ARRIVE TONIGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lawyer for suspected Irish fugitive Patrick Vincent McCarthy said Friday McCarthy will return here tonight if an application to enter West Germany is unsuccessful.

In a telephone interview from Amsterdam, Taylor said McCarthy, 24, is being held at a Dutch police barracks until his flight and is due to arrive here at 10 p.m.

Taylor said, however, that McCarthy may try once again for admission into West Germany, a request that has been turned down twice already on the grounds that he has no passport.

Taylor said the passport, which had been in safekeeping with an unidentified Seattle lawyer, was being flown to Amsterdam in hopes it would arrive in time to permit McCarthy to make a valid application for entry to West Germany before his flight departs. Immigration centre director Walter Jennings in Vancouver said "nothing concrete" has been planned for the next attempt to deport McCarthy.

He said that if McCarthy does get his passport on time and is successful in gaining entry to West Germany, then his deportation from Canada will be deemed to have taken place, and that will be the end of the matter for Canadian authorities.

McCarthy, who is believed to be wanted on an attempted murder charge in Dublin, was ordered deported from Canada for violating his visitor's status by taking a job.

He has said he would like to be allowed to go voluntarily to the U.S., but Jennings said the immigration department believes he would simply "lose himself in Canada" if allowed to go free. McCarthy entered Canada last Aug. 30 with an Irish passport.

In a telephone interview Friday, McCarthy said he has retained a Dutch lawyer and that the World Court at The Hague, which adjudicates disputes between nations, was "very interested" in his case. He supplied no details.

Water Check Planned

GENELLE (CP) — The provincial water rights branch has agreed to inspect the watershed in this southeastern British Columbia community with a representative from the department of mines, engineer Tom Oxland said Thursday.

Residents here have been trying to halt uranium exploration in the area near Castlegar, fearing waste rock from drilling will contaminate the community's water supply.

Genelle, an unincorporated community of 500, draws its water from China Creek which flows into the Columbia River.

Oxland said the health branch has been monitoring water from the creek and has found that radioactive contamination is well below national and international levels.

Gordon Rutley of Genelle said local residents hope the decision to inspect the watershed will be the first step towards a moratorium on uranium exploration in all watersheds.

They had earlier erected a barrier to prevent exploration by the China Creek Uranium Consortium, but it was knocked down Wednesday by the company.

Resume Beer Talks: Victoria

The Victoria local of the Canadian United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers Union Friday requested resumption of talks on a local basis in efforts to end a strike-lockout in the brewery industry, now in its second month.

Ray Wainright, president of the Victoria local, said his group sent a telegram to Labatt's management in Vancouver calling for an immediate return to the bargaining table.

He said, however, that a reply from Labatt's late Friday indicated talks on a local basis are out of the question.

Wainwright said the local's move was not a sign of weakness.

"All we're interested in is getting a collective agreement and getting this dispute over with," he said. "But that doesn't mean we are going to back down. If we have to stay out, we will."

He said that the brewers' association is intent on getting an industry-wide settlement or no settlement at all.

Workers at Labatt's in Victoria and New Westminster, Molson's in Vancouver, and Columbia at Creston were locked out June 8 following a strike May 26 at Carling O'Keefe.

Production Slumps In U.S.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In another indication the United States is headed for a period of slower economic growth, the Federal Reserve Board Friday reported the smallest monthly increase in industrial production since winter.

The 0.3 per cent increase in output of U.S. factories, mines and utilities was only half as large as in May and well below the heady 1.5 per cent in April and 1.2 per cent in March.

The administration has predicted a decline in the economic growth rate in the final half of this year, following a spring boom

In its revised economic forecast released last week, the White House said it expects growth in the neighborhood of 4 per cent for the rest of the year.

William Cox, the Commerce Department's chief economist, said the output figure for last month is "one more observation that adds to the conviction that there will be a sharp slowdown in the rate of economic activity."

Canada Tightens Ban On S. African Sports

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will bar South African athletes and sports organization representatives from Canada by refusing to give them non-immigrant visas, Sports Minister Iona Campagnola announced Friday.

The announcement means a toughening of the government policy against sports links with South Africa, part of a broader effort to protest that country's official policy of apartheid.

Campagnola said the withholding of visas from South African athletes and sports federation representatives "will meet requests of many sportspeople that the government take full responsibility for administration of the South Africa sport policy."

Under current policy the government withholds financial and other assistance to Canadian teams travelling to South Africa and to sports events or congresses in Canada if South Africans are expected to participate.

"The minister felt the policy placed an unfair burden on individual sport and recreation governing bodies in Canada," a written statement from her office said.

The announcement ties in with an immigration policy, effective since April 10, under which all South Africans visiting Canada must first obtain non-immigrant visas.

Under the new system, visas will be withheld from South African citizens coming to participate in sports competitions or associated congresses as representatives of that country.

Visas also will be withheld from representatives of South African national sport federations or any member organization of a federation and from South African executive members of an international sport governing body.

Campagnola said the restrictions are in accordance with an agreement reached by leaders of Commonwealth countries in Scotland last summer to "take every practicable step to discourage sporting links with South Africa because of that country's official policy of apartheid."

Australia and other Commonwealth countries have established a similar policy, the statement said. The new criteria was aimed at clarifying the government's current policy.

Movies To Roll - For Now

Odeon and Famous Players theatres in Victoria will not be shut down by a projectionists' strike this week, and probably not next week either.

K.J. Daulat, president of the B.C. Projectionists Union, said from Vancouver the membership Friday unanimously rejected the companies' latest offer.

However, he said no strike action will be taken because the 113-member union still feels the contract dispute can be resolved at the bargaining table.

"Both sides agree that we need a little rest," Daulat said.

He said there probably won't be a meeting set up for any earlier than Wednesday.

The union's 72-hour strike notice expired at noon Friday, clearing the way for a strike which could have closed all but two theatres in Victoria.

The main issues in the dispute are wages and job security.

Post Office Back on Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — Workers at the Vancouver post office ended an illegal work stoppage early today after receiving orders from local officials of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers Friday.

About 100 of 700 day-shift workers joined the work stoppage Friday after overnight workers had sat in the cafeteria rather than report to work overnight Thursday. The workers were protesting a change in starting time to 10 p.m. from 11:30 p.m. and negotiations Friday failed to resolve the dispute.

A post office spokesman said the shift would allow more mail to be moved to outlying parts of British Columbia from Vancouver for delivery the next day.

Another spokesman said mail delivery in most parts of B.C. was not affected Friday though delivery was light in Vancouver.

Union spokesman Betty Amos said Charles Stewart, manager of the Vancouver post office plant, has talked with union officials and is ready to continue negotiations when the employees still off the job return to work.

Lloyd Ingram, local union president, said the dispute resembles a situation in London, Ont., in which one worker has had 16 different shift changes since mechanization began. Union officials say the post office's mechanization program is behind current moves to change shifts.

Grants for Writers

B.C. authors and book publishers are up in arms over the latest restrictions of the provincial recreation and conservation ministry on its halfhearted, fledgling scheme to provide a little financial help to provincial publishers.

And it would seem they have every right to be.

First, the grants themselves are so small as to be practically invisible when compared either with the grants other types of artistic endeavor (let alone sports and recreational groups) receive from the government or the cost of actually publishing books. The publisher may receive an absolute maximum of $1,500 for a book of non-fiction or a book for children, $1,000 for fiction or drama and $750 for poetry. The writer is likely to get about 10 per cent of that. Hardly enough to encourage a boom in the struggling B.C. publishing industry.

Much worse, however, are the rules the publishers must comply with before they can get any money at all. It is not enough for them to be publishing good Canadian works, although Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf said originally the aim of the program was "to increase publication of works of cultural significance."

But now B.C. publishers will be elible for the grants only for books that are written by B.C. residents and that are concerned with a B.C. subject. It doesn't matter a whit how good a book a British Columbian writes — if the story takes place in Britain or Quebec or even Alberta, there'll be no B.C. government help to get it published.

Instead of a plan to encourage works of "cultural significance," it begins to sound more like a scheme to provide another string in Grace McCarthy's tourism bow — books for the tourists to take home to remind them of B.C.

As the executive of the Association of Book Publishers of B.C. put it: "A key change requiring that writers not only be resident in British Columbia but must write about British Columbia to qualify has rendered the program an insult to the province's writers, for whom it is intended, and the province's publishers, who had been counting on it to help offset the disadvantages of competin with heavily-subsidized Ontario publishers. The program appears to actively discriminate against some of the province's best writers and against writers of fiction, poetry and drama, precisely those people for whom it is supposed to be intended."

Not only are the grants smaller for writers of fiction, poetry and drama, but it is much less likely that those writers will restrict their subject matter to their home province, hence less likely that they will be eligible for any help at all.

The Social Credit government is going to have to make up its mind — either it wants to support B.C. publishers and writers or it doesn't. If it does, it must offer aid to all B.C. writers and publishers producing quality work, whether or not that work happens to deal with B.C. If it does not, that is another issue.

But support in the niggling amounts the government now is offering, hamstrung with such unreasonable requirements, is no support at all.

Garbage Problems

In the perennial discussions of the Victoria region's problems of waste disposal, particularly getting rid of our household trash, what ever happened to the recycling depot?

Quietly, it does a good job out at its converted winery warehouse on Borden Street in Saanich, but the immense potential of recycling does not seem to play a part in any consideration of our garbage problems.

Victoria and Saanich and Oak Bay tinker with extended pickups, new garbage truck hardware, different manning schemes — Saanich says changing over to one-man garbage collection routes could save $50,000 to $60,000 a year — but everyone seems to ignore the possibilities of recycling our solid waste.

The recycling depot is partly subsidized, but if the critics considered the actual costs of getting rid of the trash that it handles then Victorians are getting a bargain. Last year it took in from the public and different government offices and businesses about 6,000 tons of paper, cardboard, glass, tin and aluminum and sold the stuff to various users.

If regular solid waste disposal methods had to be used — in Saanich, the Hartland Road dump; in Victoria, the garbage barge — it would have cost the taxpayers about $30 a ton including labor, equipment and the cost of actual disposal in a dump or in the ocean — nearly $200,000.

That is a considerable saving. Saanich now spends $900,000 a year collecting the municipality's garbage, much of which consists of recyclable newspapers ($20 a ton and up these days), bottles that could be used again or returned to glass manufacturers for melting down, tin cans that can be used in steel smelter processes, and other materials.

If the capital region municipalities put as much effort into encouraging householders to separate their solid wastes into recyclable materials and genuine garbage, for more convenient pickup by sanitation staff, as they do in devising new work schedules or different trucks and carts, savings of $50,000 would soon seem small.

RICHARD GWYN

Business, Gov't Just Coo

OTTAWA — A couple of years ago, you'll recall, every businessman in Canada worth his blue chips was convinced we were going straight to socialism in a handbasket.

The mutterings in the boardrooms were a monotone. Government was too big. It spent too much. It interfered too much. It knew nothing about business. It cared less.

Businessmen didn't just mutter in private. In a break with tradition almost as gross as discussing religion or sex in the Toronto Club, they actually shouted out in public. Toronto businessman Cliff Houghton ran newspaper ads with the headline: "Mr. Trudeau. You are a National Catastrophe." Houghton received, instantly, 30,000 replies.

Corporate heavyweights were scarcely less polite. Bill Twaits, former chairman of Imperial Oil, compared business to a bull reduced to impotence because it had been "kicked around by legislation, regulation and downright abuse." Royal Bank chairman Earle McLaughlin's response to wage and price controls was to say they had "never worked." E.G. Burton, chairman of Simpson's Ltd., warned that "if government expands its reach into business much further, the market system may not survive."

An Impotent Bull

The immediate cause of this sound and fury was Trudeau's musings on television about the need for "a new society" to replace the old one in which "the free market system doesn't work any more."

In general, though, Canadian businessmen were feeling unloved, put upon, and misunderstood. They'd been called corporate welfare bums. The socialist hordes had actually taken power in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and B.C. There were the consumers, going on and on about rip-offs. And the Indians, going on and on about land claims. And the bureaucrats going on and on about "the public interest." And the conservationists. And the ecologists.

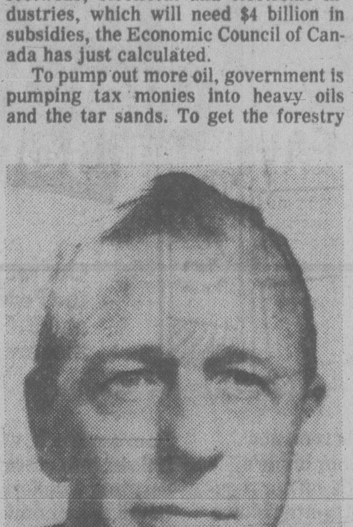
These days, the only sounds about government to be heard on the far side of the boardroom doors is cooing.

More interesting than the change in business' tone is the change in its thinking. From government, these days, what businessmen want most is more intervention, and more spending.

The biggest beggar's bowl in town at the moment belongs to the Ford Motor Company. In return for building a plant in Ontario rather than in Ohio, Ford wants $68 million worth of federal and provincial taxpayers' money. And Ford, which has to scrape along with assets of just $10 billion, will get it.

The line of businessmen looking for handouts in Ottawa these days is longer than the Canada Day parade. Shipbuilders. Aerospace companies. The construction industry, which this week was told it was "totally dependent" upon government. The textile, clothing, footwear, electrical and electronic industries, which will need $4 billion in subsidies, the Economic Council of Canada has just calculated.

To pump out more oil, government is pumping tax monies into heavy oils and the tar sands. To get the forestry industry to make use, for its own benefit, of its own wastes Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie has just announced a $125 million subsidy program.



WILLIAM TWAITS
. . . former Imperial chairman

As for government intervention, the cry for it by businessmen has become a chorus. As disclosed by the Toronto Star this week, the main recommendations of the industry-chaired, though government-organized, task force on the textile industry is for more money and for more protection against "low-cost imports." The same "defensive remedies," report sources, are proposed by the task force reports on furniture, clothing, petrochemicals and electrical products.

So much for the market system. Trudeau of course was right to say the market system, "doesn't work any more." He was quite wrong to give the impression it has ever worked, in a recognizable form, for a long, long time. He was utterly wrong, politically, to say so out loud.

"State capitalism" is a better description of our actual system, a convergence of interests of the bureaucracies of government and corporations. The best example of it today is Alberta. At the national level, state capitalism flowered furing the era of the late minister of trade and commerce, C.D. Howe. Came John Diefenbaker, in 1957, and government and industry have never quite trusted each other since. The system didn't change, but the public rhetoric did.

The government-business relations have a long way to go before they return to the cordiality of the C.D. Howe days. But they are getting there. Trudeau meets more often — about once a month — with businessmen than with any other groups. The government's long-awaited "industrial strategy," based upon the studies of 23 industries from shipbuilding to food and beverages, will be written by a committee of businessmen and labor leaders rather than by government officials. The most suitable title for the report might be, "What's good for the Ford Motor Company is good for Canada."

Comes the Savior

Government's embrace of business as a "national savior" does invite one intriguing question. Government has embraced other saviors before. Education is the best example. (Others include culture, science, social welfare and, these days, sports and recreation.)

The life cycle of each savior is unvarying. Government's excited discovery of the newest final solution to all national problems. The unlocking of the treasury door. Expansion. The dismayed discovery that the solution only creates more problems. Contraction. The closing of the treasury door. The recriminations.

The even more dismaying discovery, by education, by culture, by whatever, that once embraced by governments these institutions have no choice but to remain there forever, as dependents. The intriguing question therefore is whether business now will go the same way as all the other government-funded saviors have gone.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Report Card Time, Part I
Victoria City Council

July is here, school's out and the students have come home with their final report cards. The provincial legislature has also ended its spring term and our municipal politicians are halfway through the year. It seems an appropriate time to present the editor's report cards for 1978.

In this space for the next five weeks, many of the politicians who spend your tax dollars and make decisions that affect your lives will be rated. Those graded will be, in order: Victoria city council, Saanich council, Greater Victoria school trustees, the provincial cabinet and the opposition in the provincial legislature.

In each case, the politicians are listed roughly in order of merit, from best to worst. Grades are approximately equal to those in the school system: A = excellent; B = good; C = mediocre; D = unsatisfactory.

The ratings are based on a subjective evaluation of each person's performance during the past six months. For today's grades of Victoria council, factors taken into consideration include: performance in the political arena, performance on committees and departments for which individual aldermen are responsible, responsiveness to concerns of the community (using that word in its widest sense), and over-all contribution to civic government.

Let us then begin with Victoria city council:

It is regrettable, but no one on Victoria council was found deserving of an A rating. Several of the B-rated council members are quite good, but each has an area of weakness which prohibits a grade of excellent. Moreover, the top aldermen are close enough in peformance that it would be unfair to single one out for the higher rating.

ALD. JOHN HAYES - B - Hayes gets top billing for being open-minded and willing to look at each issue on its merits rather than on the basis of preconceived biases. Yet at the same time he is willing to stand strongly by his principles and suffer the consequences if need be. He has done a good job with the Neighborhood Improvement Program which requires sensitive and tactful handling. He misses an A rating only because he often is not forceful or assertive enough in presenting his views.

ALD. MURRAY GLAZIER - B - In his years on council Glazier has developed a wealth of knowledge invaluable to city government. He actually understands the details of the new assessment system and the problems of sewer outfall construction, and can explain and deal with those sorts of issues clearly and well. His weakness is an excessive concern with his own political ambitions and, hence, with his public image — a concern that sometimes causes him to do things that he would not otherwise do and that really help neither the city nor his image.

ALD. ROBIN BLENCOE - B - Blencoe, a rookie this year, gets top marks for energy, enthusiasm, hard work, and interesting new ideas. Although some of his ideas seem radical, they are usually carefully thought out and well presented. He has done quite well with the parks and recreation portfolio — although that portfolio had nowhere to go but up. However, he has lost many marks for his performance in the political arena where his greenness has often showed and he has lost unpleasant battles to the more experienced and streetwise politicians.

ALD. BILL TINDALL - B - Tindall scores 100 per cent for performance in the political arena; he is the master politician, managing to stick to his own policies and principles without having to be aggressive or defensive about it. Yet he seems to lack any creative impetus; he rarely comes forward with new ideas of his own, and although downtown development is a major part of his portfolio, all the new proposals for downtown have had to come from Sam Bawlf and a provincially-established committee.

ALD. BILL McELROY - B - McElroy, the other council rookie, has approached the job in exactly the opposite manner to Blencoe — he has tested the water carefully with each toe instead of diving in and being eaten by the sharks. As a result, he has not yet made much of an impression, though most of what he has said has made good sense. In the last few weeks he has shown signs of becoming more forward and assertive; this is to be encouraged.

MAYOR MIKE YOUNG - C - Young remains a solid, safe administrator, but his political performance is uninspiring. He has frequently had trouble coping with the conflicts brought about by the addition of McElroy and Blencoe to council and has too often come across as irritable and snappish. Also, despite his years in the political arena, he frequently talks in the grey jargon of the lawyer's boardroom instead of in the ordinary language of the people.

ALD. BOB WRIGHT - C - Wright wins such good grades for energy, hard work and innovative ideas that he should be deserving of a much higher rating than this. Unfortunately, his performance at council meetings is usually little short of disastrous — an unpalatable mixture of over-aggressiveness, defensiveness and one-liners that are more suitable for an elementary schoolyard. Much of this is based on some deep ideological hatreds that will be hard for him to erase, but he has improved at the last couple of council meetings.

ALD. LARRY RYAN - C - Ryan is saved from an unsatisfactory rating by some good work he has done behind the scenes to prevent labor relations at city hall from being even worse than they are. But he obviously has little stomach for the political arena and is more a silent partner than an active participant at council meetings.

ALD. RON McKENZIE - D - Sometimes in school, children receive failing grades because they have missed too many classes. This is the case with McKenzie who has been away for more than two months of the six-month rating period. Worse, he was scarcely missed.

Grade for council as a whole - B - This is a group of men sincerely concerned about the future of the city, obviously trying to do their best for the community, and generally succeeding fairly well. They still need to learn to be more accepting of public participation in government. Also sometimes personality differences boil over to the point where the over-all effectiveness of the group is hampered. — B.McL.

No Language Law

The more one ponders the question, the more likely one is to become convinced that the best language legislation is no legislation at all.

In the early days of our union we got along just fine without any. Our troubles began with Manitoba's banning of French in the schools, Ontario's Rule 17 on the same subject, both causing bitterness which lasts to this day. Nor has the situation been improved by Ottawa's Official Languages Act and Quebec's bills 22 and 101, the latter striving not for justice but revenge. If Mr. Trudeau is right in saying that speaking one's mother tongue is as natural as breathing, why pass laws about it? And why should evil laws not be vetoed by Ottawa?

England, on the other hand, showed us a better way long ago. If after the Battle of Hastings restrictive laws had been passed by either side, the language of Shakespeare would never have been developed and we would all be the poorer. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Interesting Results

I find the results of the University of Victoria food survey very interesting.

Retail stores such as Safeway and Woodwards rank relatively high on a cost basis according to the survey. It seems somewhat ironic that these are two of the fairest employers in the Greater Victoria area. You won't find employees enjoying a coffee break on flour sacks in any of these retail groceries. Also, the best employees usually work for the fairest employers. The quality of the product is a factor which is not a visible criteria in the survey which these students have conducted.

For these reasons I think that your readers, as consumers, may take an unrealistic attitude when purchasing food products at the listed outlets.

An appropriate analogy would be when one contemplates air travel. I feel more comfortable with a new plane and an experienced pilot and so be it with the retail food trade.

I might add that I have no financial interest in the wholesale or retail grocery business.

The object of this letter is to let your readers realize that the ranking on this list is not a reasonable indication of all aspects of retail food manufacturing. — D. G. Anderson, 205-215 Gorge Road East.

Give Him a Call

The public has been hearing a good deal about inflation. As usual, little notice has been taken of the subject except to condemn the rise in prices and excuse demands for income increases which in the end are self-defeating. Almost nothing is said about the fact that inflation will eventually deprive our society of all the freedom we have left, that large sectors of society are almost totally dependent on government handouts, that our political representatives talk about manipulating the money supply to correct our economic troubles, trying hard to sound as if they knew something about the subject.

Even less is said about the the condition not only causing economic rot but moral rot as well. Many economists and most politicians have suggested that some inflation can be accommodated, say three per cent a year. This idea has given respectability to the government's desire to spend more than it collects. The myth that a government handout is free persists in spite of increasing evidence that it is the most expensive form of getting a living ever devised. Government has nothing and can only take and redistribute the wealth of others. If it distributes more than it takes it destroys the value and utility of money — a very slick form of robbery from those who lend or save and attempt to be self-reliant.

Inflation is nothing less than governmental counterfeiting, encouraged by the greedy and feared by the provident. In Victoria there is a group called the Help End Inflation Association. It is small, but it is growing and there has never been an attempt to tackle a more important social and economic problem. The objectives are education and action. The chairman is John Thornburgh, 5093 Lochside Drive, Victoria. Why not give him a call? While we still live in a democracy your ideas and your numbers are needed. — H. E. F. Makovski, 3539 Plymouth Road.

Avoiding the Deaths of Chickens and Grandmothers

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
Vancouver Sun

Wolf-killing and the death of grandma in the back bedroom are subjects not normally linked, except in Red Riding Hood stories. However, the connection has been made by Skeena MLA Cyril Shelford, a dogged, earnest man not given to flights of fancy, one who has a claim to be heard.

For a long time Mr. Shelford has been advocating a reduction of the wolf population in northern B.C. When a young Vancouver man protested in a letter, the MLA composed a longer letter of reply. He has provided a copy.

Much of Mr. Shelford's letter is concerned with the statistics of wolf and caribou populations. His argument is that predators such as wolves do not maintain a good or a kind balance of nature but one of savage oscillation between conditions of famine and of plenty. It is familiar stuff to any who have entered the controversy prepared with any data more cogent than their emotions.

But in this letter Mr. Shelford goes further. He poses another and larger question: Has urban society failed to educate young people in the realities of life and, more importantly, the realities of death?

He writes:

"I often think we protect our young people too much from the realities of life.

"They don't come in direct contact with death, like the older generations did when 50 per cent of the people were farmers and saw death of one kind or another every month.

"Now there is only six-per-cent farming. It has changed the whole outlook of the new generation.

"Nearly all the pioneer women had no choice but to go out and chop the chickens' heads off, while the children watched. Today, people pick up the chicken meat at Safeway.

"Very few connect the Safeway chicken with the cute ball of fluff it was in the first few weeks of its life.

"In the pioneer days, grandma died in the back bedroom of the house, instead of being hid away in some hospital or rest home."

As an explanation of some of the popular anti-death campaigns of our times, this is persuasive stuff.

It goes far to explain what some of us have heretofore found inexplicable — that to kill baby seals of Newfoundland is depraved and despicable but to buy lamb or veal in a supermarket is entirely acceptable.

Could it be because the supermarket does not ask us to look at photos of slaughterhouses when we buy, while opponents of the seal hunts insist that we see vivid pictures of Newfoundland sealers swinging clubs?

Perhaps it is not pity for the young seals which is felt but anger aroused by a crass reminder that everything that lives must die, even thee and me, brother.

Man is supposed to be distinct from other species in that he lives in the knowledge of his own eventual death. Modern society, notably the comfortable middle-class society of the cities which produces the most ardent young recruits for protest groups, has almost but not quite succeeded in hiding this fact from itself.

Grandma does not die in the bedroom any more. For one reason, there are few three-generation households left now. Two-generation households last just long enough to project one or two children into the higher education system, thereafter each generation is expected to live separate and apart.

The generation of grandparents, when health fails, is hustled into retirement homes, rest homes, chronic care hospitals — almost any institution where it may be said there are professional staffs, far better fitted to see them out of this world than their immediate family.

If Granny is to die in the house it must be by sudden and neat heart attack, preferably on a Sunday afternoon. A terminal illness lasting more than a few hours is a matter for hospitals, where people are trained to deal with deaths.

As with people, with pets.

If the household cat has too many kittens the excess are not drowned. The children would be upset. So would many a parent.

The unwanted litters go to the pound where none of the family need witness the execution or, worse, they are thrust out into a cold world by casual gift or designed neglect and allowed to find there deaths in ways which are less pleasant but, being invisible, more acceptable.

Much of the oceans of tears shed for baby seals, whales and wolves may be for ourselves. They remind us of truths which have become unmentionable.

Until recent years, it seems men were less furtive in discussing the natural processes.

Death was the final episode of a process that began with birth. Men might wish for honorable deaths, Christian deaths, peaceful deaths. But did they, to the extent they do today, try to convince themselves that life, youthful and abundant, was permanent?

In the abstract, death is an extremely popular subject. For 20 years we have shown an almost morbid interest in it.

The big bombs were going to kill us all. Then radiation was to carry us away, millions at a wallop. Currently the scare is cancer — it's a dull day when some scientist somewhere does not discover a new carcinogen in our diet, our clothing or the atmosphere we breathe.

But such are remote conceptions. They are not the routine deaths of food animals, of horses, of wild animals and of people we love. All those were simple realities of life on the pioneer farms. They were not welcome, but they were inevitable. No myths could be created to shield people from the eternal truths, so they came to terms with them directly.

Gulls, People Blamed As Sea Swallows Vanish

By GEOFFREY LEAN
London Observer

One of the rarest and most beautiful of seabirds, the roseate tern, is mysteriously and alarmingly declining in Europe and North America.

Last year only about 600 of these graceful "sea swallows" nested in the British Isles — a decline from some 3,500 birds in the mid-1960s. It is now the rarest breeding seabird in the British Isles and probably in all North-West Europe.

In Brittany, the only other European breeding area, the fall has been even more dramatic — from 500 pairs to 30 in about eight years.

And on the East coast of North America the decline has been between a third and a half to between 2,000 and 3,000 pairs.

Dr. Gareth Thomas, senior research biologist for the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, (RSPB), whose reserves hold three-quarters of the roseate terns that nest in North-West Europe, says: "All the populations that have been studied have fallen markedly in the last two decades."

No clear-cut reasons for the decline have emerged yet, he says, but some problems have been identified that may be behind the population crash.

One idea is that the weather may be to blame; the roseate tern (so named after the pink flush on its breast in the summer) may be adapted for living in warmer areas and is gradually withdrawing from northern breeding extremities as a result of the general cooling of the world's climate over the past 30 years.

But the strongest suspects are gulls — and people.

The number of herring gulls and lesser black-backed gulls is exploding, particularly in North-West Europe. They are overcrowding their old colonies and taking over new ones.

As a result they are, literally, colonizing the lower, smaller, offshore islands that are the roseate terns' favorite breeding grounds.

They get there about six weeks before the terns each year, and are incubating and fiercely defensive of their territory by the time the sea swallows turn up. Any terns that try to nest near them are chased away. As a result, says Thomas, "we have witnessed the extinction of all terns on two reserves and on others depressed populations due to this acute competition for nest-space."

Now man is taking a hand on the terns' side. Where the gulls have only started their encroachment, continual removal of their nests and eggs has, in Thomas' words "lessened their site tenacity" and given the terns a chance to set up their nests and defend them.

But where the terns are being swamped, altogether tougher measures are necessary and gulls are culled to make room for the terns.

But man is not always on the sea swallows' side. In the past egg-collectors and vandals have broken up their colonies, though the RSPB believes that this is now decreasing.

More serious perhaps are the findings of recent research by the British Trust of Ornithology on the roseate terns' wintering grounds off West Africa.

Young birds, ringed in Britain, are known to have been trapped in eight African coastal countries. About three-quarters of these ringing recoveries are reported from Ghana.

What happens, it seems, is that children and young men catch them for food by placing nooses baited with dead fish along the tide-line. The experts think that the terns come to eat them because of shortages of their natural foods further out to sea.

It seems, too, that higher proportions of roseate terns are caught than of the more abundant common and Sandwich terns which share the same wintering grounds.

The RSPB has helped to send an expert out to Ghana to investigate the trapping, and the British and Netherland sections of the International Council for Bird Preservation have been in touch with government and university departments to beg for better protection of all kinds of tern that winter along the West African coast.

Cruisers Ogle A Rare Pair

Quick now, what's the rarest bird nesting around Victoria this year? While you're pondering the question let me tell you about a pair of birds I think deserve consideration. But first, a little background.

If someone had put that question to me a couple of weeks ago I would have had to say I didn't know. Now, after a visit to Mandarte Island off Sidney, I can reply with confidence that if there are any rarer than the candidate I have in mind, then they aren't here, because anything less than a pair is nothing as far as nesting birds are concerned.

This revelation came to me aboard the M.V. Lakewood as she stood off Mandarte with a couple of dozen birders aboard. The occasion was another of those delightful cruises organized by Swiftsure Tours for naturalists. The attraction, this time, was the hundreds of Glaucous-winged Gulls, Pelagic and Double-crested Cormorants and Pigeon Guillemots that nest on the island.

But among the horde of milling and calling birds that swarmed over Mandarte that day were two which, in the excitement usually associated with an active colony of seabirds, might easily have been overlooked. On the other hand, once seen, they could hardly be forgotten.

To describe these two birds, from the neck down, they'd come up looking much like several other seabirds that go about as small, dumpy, dark, duck-like birds. But, from the neck up, they're something else.

Consider this: a bird with a white face, a pair of baleful yellow eyes and two creamy white tufts — one on each side of its head — that sweep back from its eyes, like a pair of ram's horns, to rest on the bird's upper back. Top this off with a huge, parrot-like, reddish beak that looks like something left over after a meeting of a committee established to design a bird.

Sound like something out of a Salvador Dali's imagination? Maybe so, but it isn't. It's a bona fide avian resident of our coast where, in places, it nests by the hundreds. What makes the bird notable for us today is that this abundance is limited to islands off our outer coast; on inside waters the birds are seldom seen, and even less frequently found nesting.

For several years a small colony — never more than half-a-dozen pairs — nested on Mandarte but now only one pair remains to represent the species in these parts. Another pair, seen regularly last summer near Trial Island, suggested that the Mandarte birds could have had competition as the only nesting pair on inside waters. But this year the Mandarte pair stands alone.

In the past when I've visited Mandarte, I've had one or other of the pair pointed out to me but all I ever saw of them was a dark shape, hurtling into the sun. If I'd had to identify them, I'd never have been able to do it on the basis of what I saw.

But all this changed aboard the Lakewood that day because one of the birds not only hurtled past the boat at close range to give everyone who could get their binoculars on to it a good look, but later settled in the water within a few yards of the boat and for five or 10 minutes was the focus of all eyes as the Lakewood moved slowly around it.

It was an incongruous sight — the great boat circling the tiny bird — but the bird did not seem to mind as it swam quietly, keeping its distance, and one eye always trained on that battery of lenses trained on it.

To many aboard that day this was our first sight of this curious little seabird in the flesh. All of us had seen it in photographs and artist's represention. But even in the dull light on the day we saw it, the bird, in life, was much more than the same bird on the page of a book.

If you haven't already guessed, the bird was a Tufted Puffin, and it and its mate hidden somewhere among the rocks at the southwestern end of Mandarte Island are my candidates for the rarest nesting birds around Victoria this year.

The New Kissinger Must Go

By BLAIR CLARK
The Nation

BRZEZINSKI . . . 'all thumbs'

The best and perhaps the only way for President Carter to put an end to the babbling incoherence of his administration's foreign policy is to fire Zbigniew Brzezinski. He should then take the next logical step and abolish the position of National Security Adviser.

After the days of Kennedy's Bundy and Johnson's Rostow, when it could be called important but not quite central, the role of National Security Adviser suffered Kissingerization. That is, it became the centre of the web of foreign and military policy, eclipsing two large traditional cabinet departments, State and Defense. The reason for that abnormal and unhealthy growth was not so much the genius of Dr. Kissinger, as we now know, as the ominous secretiveness and determination of Richard Nixon to hold all the strings of power in his own hands. It had to do with Nixon's kind of paranoia, not with the circumstances of the actual world in which the U.S. must operate.

Often comical

Now we have Zbigniew Brzezinski imitating, even trying to outdo, Kissinger in ways that are often comical except for the seriousness of the matter. One significant detail distinguishing the Kissinger operation from that of Brzezinski tells a good deal: Kissinger was his own public relations man (and a whiz at PR he was), whereas his successor hired his own flack out of the Washington bureau of Time magazine. There could be no clearer signal that the office of National Security Adviser has outgrown its breeches.

Carter himself is in the undignified position of having to defend Brzezinski against the attacks on him by Tass, Pravda, Izvestia, Red Star and the other organs of the U.S.S.R. "It is certainly not right," he remarked plaintively in Texas, "for the Soviet Union and Cuba to jump on Dr. Brzezinski when I am the one who shapes the policy after getting advice from him and others."

Pathetic tone

That sounds magnanimous, in the "buck stops here" tradition. But the defence of one of the president's staffers should never have to be made in that pathetic tone. Carter felt called upon to make the statement because he has allowed his confidential adviser to erect himself into an institution with a set of policy options all its own. It should be noted that Mr. Kissinger never allowed himself to be put in the position of representing just one competing tendency within that administration. Whatever went on behind the scenes in the way of scheming or manipulation, Kissinger always managed to represent the policy that the president finally adopted. That made him unchallangeable by the rest of the bureaucracy. The position of his successor is quite the opposite.

It should perhaps be said in defence of Brzezinski as a bureaucratic infighter that his chief's wavering character and shifting positions may have made this quite public battle of the tendencies inevitable. Carter's long fiddling with the question of Cuban involvement in Zaire, his geographical straddling on human rights, his trying to have it both ways on "linkage" are just recent examples of his indistinct line on most issues — neither hard nor soft; simply fuzzy. Given Carter's real indecisiveness, it is remarkable that Secretary of State Vance, who in any case lacks Brzezinski's erratic qualities, has been able to pursue as sober and realistic a course as he has toward the main objectives of American foreign policy. It is Vance and not Brzezinski who has minimized the "veering" on foreign policy which the latter has said is unsuitable, if not impossible, for the ship of state of a great power.

Perhaps the kindest thing to say about Brzezinski is that he is in charge of an institution that has expanded too fast while outliving its usefulness. Carter does seem to hanker for a more open presidency than those of his two immediate predecessors, and he has encouraged some, if not many, flowers of policy to bloom outside the White House grounds. FDR could do that, being a skilled gardener; significantly, he limited those free-spreading plants to the domestic variety and kept the foreign kinds under his thumb. Carter lacks that kind of thumb. It might even be said that he is all thumbs when it comes to our relations with the rest of the world.

Cuba posting?

Anyway, the president can do without a Brzezinski, and especially without this particular one. He should de-institutionalize the "national security," making it once more the province of the whole government he heads. As for the national Security Adviser himself, why not make him ambassador to Cuba where he could instruct Fidel Castro on the meaning of what he calls "the code of detente"?

Int. Paper

International Paper Co., the world's largest paper manufacturer, reported a 17-per-cent increase in profits for the second quarter of 1978.

Helped by increased orders from publishers and strong demand for printing and writing papers, the company's profits for the period ended June 30 climbed to $69.3 million, or $1.46 a share, from $59.1 million, or $1.26 a share in the second quarter of 1977. Sales rose 11 per cent to $1.05 billion from $946 million.

Profits for the first-half rose 18 per cent to $127.2 million, or $2.69 a share, from $107.7 million, or $2.30 a share a year earlier. Sales increased 12 per cent to $2.20 billion from $1.79 billion.

The company said its wood products operations reached record levels of production and sales of housing starts were "well sustained" throughout the quarter.

In packaging products, the company said customers' orders for corrugated containers continued to show "significant strength," with monthly shipments reaching record levels.

It said that while container prices have improved somewhat, overall prices are still below last year's levels.

HIS CLIP JOINT WINS IN COURT

BURNABY (CP) — A Burnaby barber appears to have won the right to take a little off the top on Mondays after a charge against him for operating on that day, contrary to a local bylaw, was dismissed in provincial court Friday.

Barber and hairstylist Al Principe made an impressive oration in his defence, attempting to enter the tools of his trade as exhibits, but Judge Selwyn Romilly found a reason of his own to dismiss the charge laid last February by the municipality's chief licence inspector.

The judge said he could find no definition of a barbershop in the municipal shop closing bylaw and that meant the Crown could not prove its case, since women's and "unisex" hairstyling shops are allowed to open on Mondays.

"Under the terms of the bylaw it appears the municipality has arbitrarily decided that one sort of hair cutting and styling operation falls under the category of barbershop and another does not," said Judge Romilly.

Principe said the dismissal of the charge means he now will operate his shop on the same hours as the other 85 businesses in the Lougheed Mall.

Federal Gov't at Odds Over Native Fishing

VANCOUVER (CP) — New regulations giving the Squamish Indian band unlimited fishing rights in the Seymour, Squamish and Capilano rivers are causing problems for the federal fisheries and Indian affairs ministries.

The regulations were approved eight months ago by Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner, but officials in Ottawa say Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc was not consulted and did not learn of the changes until May.

Under the 21-section bylaw, the band is allowed to fish any time for salmon or steelhead in the rivers, which flow through three sections of the band's reserve about 65 kilometres north of here. They can fish by any means except rockets, explosive materials or shells.

Hugh Anderson (L—Comox-Alberni), the parliamentary assistant to LeBlanc, said both ministries are trying to resolve the problem themselves.

"You can't just isolate it as a native food fishery," he said. "We have lost half of our traditional production (in the last 50 years)."

He said the Indians probably have good intentions, "but with the price of salmon the temptations to overfish and sell the catch would be too much. If this happened it would be a disaster for the fishery."

Al Gibson, fisheries branch manager for the Strait of Georgia, said the regulations are law but the ministry believes the Fisheries Act supersedes them.

"If the Indians try to enforce them we will have to challenge it in court," Gibson said.

The regulations say that one-third of any stream and not less than two-thirds of the width of a main channel at low tide shall always be left open, and it prohibits any person other than a band member from fishing in waters controlled by the band.

Band manager Joe Mathias, a third-year law student, said the bylaw is designed to regulate native food fishing and "there is certainly no thought to overfish."

He said the band will catch mainly from the Squamish River because of a short supply in the Seymour and government plans to rebuild the Capilano.

Frank Wheeler, federal fisheries officer for the Squamish area, said he expects to issue 40 to 50 salmon food licences by September.

"There are a few licences out now but the band mainly is interested in chums which come later in the summer and September. What it looks like they are trying to do is transfer the authority to themselves."

Last year, he said, Squamish band members took 20,000 to 30,000 fish from the Squamish River with an average weight of 13 pounds.

Case Marks an End To Blaming Indians?

HAZELTON (CP) — Spokesmen for the Gitksan-Carrier tribal council say the dismissal of 14 charges of illegally selling salmon laid against 17 native Indians marks the end of attempts to attribute major poaching operations to Indians.

Stuart Rush, lawyer for the Indians, said the cases did not succeed because federal fisheries officials did not appear, officers could not positively identify Indians, evidence presented was insufficient and the sale of fish could not be proved.

But the Indians in this community about 1,200 kilometres northwest of Vancouver and in nearby Smithers say the federal fisheries department exaggerated the seriousness of the charges.

Neil Sterret, tribal council co-ordinator, said, "They blew these charges up as much as possible and refused to drop them, even though we continually offered to sit around the table and solve our basic problem, which is economic."

He said the charges involved no more than 10 fish per case and about 60 fish in total.

—A 75-year-old man was brought to court 11 times on one charge before the judge dismissed the case;

—An Indian with the same first name as another was made to appear in court several times before the Crown realized its error;

—A federal fisheries officer, working under cover, asked an Indian to help him carry fish up a hill. When they reached the top, an officer in uniform arrested the Indian.

Volrich Rapped On Transit

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has criticized Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich for complaining about the province's new transit legislation while not taking the time to attend meetings explaining it.

Curtis said in a letter to Volrich that Vancouver was the only invited municipality which neglected to send a representative to a special briefing on the Urban Transit Authority Act following its introduction in the legislature last month.

Volrich had complained that the new act, which was later passed by the legislature, is unfair to Vancouver residents because it will force them to help subsidize their bus service, a burden now shouldered by B.C. Hydro.

Curtis said that Volrich's concerns "would not have become issues had you taken the opportunity to attend the very lengthy briefing session I held upon introduction."

FIRST STRIKE IN 25 YEARS

PORT MOODY (CP) — Employees of Reichhold Chemicals Ltd., walked off the job at noon Friday in the first strike to hit the plant since it began operation 25 years ago.

Local 9601 of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers, representing 50 plant workers, served strike notice after contract talks broke down over wages.

The union turned down offers of a 6.5 per cent wage hike in a one-year contract and 13.4 per cent over two years.

Current wages for plant workers range from a base rate of $7.01 an hour to $9.25 for foremen. The employees' last contract expired May 22.

Union Squabble Halts Building

VANCOUVER (CP) — A jurisdictional dispute between two construction unions halted work on a multi-million-dollar apartment project in nearby Burnaby Friday, one day after negotiators for 40,000 construction workers and 850 contractors in British Columbia announced that a tentative contract settlement had been reached in the industry. Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) set up a picket line at the site, charging that members of local 170 of the Plumbers Union were performing work assigned to the electricians under the joint plant.

Kidnapping Trial Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three men and a woman have been committed to stand trial on charges laid after the kidnapping and confinement of a bank manager's wife May 12. Provincial Court Judge Gordon Johnson ordered Roger McKinney, 25, of Snohomish, Wash., Dino Pitton, 22, and Emil Mantha, 33, both of Vancouver, and Leah Ann Slemmer, 25, of Everett, Wash., to stand trial on charges of kidnapping, extortion and unlawful confinement. They were charged following the kidnapping of Heather Haley, 34, from her home in North Delta, just south of here. She was released three hours later without any ransom being paid.

Herbicide Protest Planned Monday

VERNON (CP) — Environmentalits will be out at Kalamalka Lake, just south of here, Monday protesting the provincial government's planned application of the herbicide 2,4-D, Greenpeace spokesman Peter Chataway, said Friday.

Less Cherry Disease, Survey Shows

PENTICTON (CP) — A survey conducted in the Penticton area by the provincial ministry of agriculture shows that only 150 cherry trees are affected with little cherry disease compared with 300 at this time last year. The disease causes trees to bear small mishapen fruit, unsuitable for commercial sale.

Appeal Justice Appointed

OTTAWA (CP) — J. Douglas Lambert, 48, of Vancouver, chairman of the Law Reform Commission of British Columbia, has been appointed a justice of the province's court of appeal, Justice Minister Ron Basford announced Friday.

Crime Squad Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new 15-member detective squad has been formed to deal with major crimes in the city, Inspector Vic Lake said Friday.

He said the unit will handle crimes that cross police district boundary lines, bizarre and complex cases, sudden flares of criminal activity and serious crimes beyond the capabilities of district team units.

Lake said the section is made up largely of members of the old homicide and robbery squad which has been disbanded.

WCB REVIEW APPOINTMENTS

Appointments of Max Salter and Lester Campbell, both of Vancouver, to the boards of review constituted under the Workers' Compensation Act were announced Friday by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Salter is director of safety and health for the Vancouver regional council of the International Woodworkers of America. Campbell is personnel manager and saftey supervisor of the Oosta Division of Eurocan Pulp and Paper Co. Ltd.

Ottawa to Help Fishermen Gain Control

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — A credit measure is being developed to help Canadian fishermen buy their own boats and gain control of the fishery, federal fisheries minister Romeo LeBlanc said here Friday.

LeBlanc told reporters he is not looking for a fight with the provinces but if the dispute over the right of fishermen to organize must go to the Supreme Court of Canada for settlement, he is prepared to see that done.

"It seems to me we have to decide the fishermen should do the fishing and the processors should do the processing and the marketing," the minister said.

LeBlanc said it would be useful if fishermen were more in control not only of their fish but the equipment they use.

"I am advocating ownership of the fleet by the fishermen," the minister said. "We can't say we want fishermen to be independent and then do nothing to help them."

His opposition to vertically integrated companies, those which control the catching, processing and marketing of fish, has not been accepted unanimously.

He said the department has rejected applications from fishermen who want to sell their licences to companies.

"It is obvious in a situation like that the value of the boat would be assessed beyond its real value so it is a bit of a windfall for the fishermen to be able to sell to a large enterprise," he said.

"The licence belongs to the people of Canada and I don't like to see the licence so expensive the individaul could not afford to buy it."

LeBlanc said that in 1978 there should not be obstacles to a group of fishermen getting together to do what they want by using the idea that they are self-employed to prevent them from negotiating.

He denied that he would take provinces to court if they prevented fishermen from obtaining collective bargaining. Prince Edward Island does not currently have legislation allowing fishermen to join unions.

"What I said was there was some debate, including the B.C. case which is before the Supreme Court, to determine whether fishermen could organize under provincial or federal legislation," he said.

"That case is now being assessed to see if there would be a requirement for a change under the Canadian Labor Code."

If the decision is clearly that fishermen should be under federal jurisdiction then there may be some changes in federal law, he said.

Dredge Bid Withheld, Director Tells Trial

TORONTO (CP) — William B. Laurie of Vancouver testified Friday that a company of which he is a director agreed to withhold a bid on a large Quebec dredging contract in return for a $150,000 forfeiture payment on an option to buy a dredge.

Laurie, executive vice-president of Dawson Construction Ltd., which owns 37 per cent of Sceptre Dredging Ltd., told a fraud-conspiracy trial that the 1969 deal was between Sceptre and MacNamara Corp.

Sceptre and MacNamara are among nine companies and 11 businessmen charged with defrauding public agencies of almost $4.3 million between 1969 and 1975 by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

Laurie said that in reality, McNamara had no intention of buying the dredge from Sceptre.

The dredge was being sold for $2 million and the option to buy it was to be conditional on McNamara's being the successful bidder on the federal government dredging contract at Beauport Flats.

Laurie said the agreement between McNamara and Sceptre was that if McNamara did not get the Beauport contract, the option would end and no money would have to be paid.

Insulate Advice Reversed

OTTAWA (CP) — The energy department has reversed a previous recommendation and now warns homeowners that enclosing and insulating recessed lighting fixtures is a potential fire hazard.

A spokesman for the department's conservation office said Friday the practice, originally recommended to homeowners in a pamphlet called Keeping the Heat In, was thought to be a safe procedure two years ago but has since been found to be unsafe.

Some local and provincial fire prevention codes have recently forbidden it, he said.

The pamphlet originally recommended that light bulbs be contained in metal boxes recessed into attic space, surrounded by gypsum-lined plywood and then insulated.

Vapona Safe, Says Shell

TORONTO (CP) — Shell Canada Ltd. has denied a report by the British Columbia agriculture ministry that the company's Vapona no-pest strip contains a chemical that could cause pregnant women to bear children with genetic mutations.

The company said in a news release Friday that published reports linking dichlorvos, an insecticide used in the no-pest strips and flea collars, with dioxin, a chemical known to cause birth defects in test animals, were misinterpreted.

"There is nothing in the process of making dichlorvos that suggests the possiblity of the existence of dioxin," the company said.

The published reports concerned a test conducted two years ago by the federal agriculture ministry which found evidence of dioxin in a flea collar containing tetrachlorinphos but no dichlorvos.

A spokesman for Agriculture Canada said the test was conducted early in the development of detection methods for dioxin "and we think those results are suspect because later tests proved to be negative."

The tests would be repeated, the spokesman said.

Conflict Deadline Lifted

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Statistics Canada has cancelled a July 14 deadline for signing of a controversial conflict-of-interest form by its 6,000 employees.

Conservative MP Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton) said Friday he was told by an official in the office of Chief Statistician Dr. Peter Kirkham that the deadline has been lifted while officials seek to clarify a trouble-causing guideline to which the declaration is linked.

Statistics Canada has been in hot water with its employees and opposition politicians ever since it issued a 34-page employee booklet in June entitled "Policies and Procedures on Conflict of Interest and Standard of Conduct."

At issue is a guideline that warns public servants they are guilty of misconduct if they act in a way that "tends to undermine confidence in the bureau (Statistics Canada) or any of its employees or that impairs relations with other federal departments or governments in Canada or that criticizes the government."

The declaration employees were asked to sign makes no reference to criticizing the government but, according to Baker, he and other Conservatives were deluged with calls from worried or upset employees, disgruntled that they had to sign anything.

The declaration simply asks employees to attest that "I have read and understood the rules and guidelines on conflict of interest contained in the booklet 'Policies and Procedures on Conflict of Interest and Standard of Conduct' including those concerning financial assets and outside activities and agree to abide by them."

Baker wrote Kirkham July 5 urging that the deadline be lifted until the semantics problem is cleared up. He was told by Kirkham's aide that a rewritten guideline would be submitted soon.

CBC, Technicians Talking

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC and its technicians union agreed Friday to resume formal contract negotiations aimed at settling a dispute which could disrupt coverage of the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next month.

A joint, one-sentence statement issued by the CBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, (NABET) said: "NABET and the CBC have agreed to resume negotiations on Sunday in Ottawa."

The union has been without a contract since July 2.

Troubadours

The Downtown Minstrel Show — Definitely Worthy of Note

By PAUL MOSS, Times Staff

Gilbert and Sullivan it isn't, but the music that hangs on the air of a lazy July afternoon in downtown Victoria brings to mind that W.S. Gilbert verse from The Mikado:

A wandering minstrel I—
A thing of shreds and patches,
Of ballads, songs and snatches,
And dreamy lullaby!

For the jeans of Victoria's strolling minstrels and troubadours tend to be, if not exactly shredded, at least well patched. And with their ballads and catchy melodies they are now as firmly established in the downtown milieu as the the tour buses, the souvenir shops and all the other trappings of a Victorian summer.

Bluegrass on one corner, Dixieland on another, duelling banjos a block or two away, they stake out their sidewalk pitches and sing or play for their supper.

Passers-by often gather in a mini-audience around an individual or group, feet tapping to the rhythms, and applaud at the end of a number.

For the inveterate people-watcher and amateur psychologist, it's interesting to stand amid such an impromptu gathering on Government Street and study the faces of those approaching.

Mom and Dad Tourist arguing with fractious offspring about who does what or goes where; the civil servant out for a lunch-hour stroll and probably hating the thought of returning to a stuffy office on such a perfect afternoon the sober-suited executive preoccupied with his next deal.

But suddenly the music surrounds them, willy-nilly they become part of a spontaneous happening and before you know it they're smiling, nodding to each other, gloom forgotten.

It's this kind of easy rapport which appeals to Dale Brophy, one of the doyens of Victoria's street musicians, who started seven summers ago.

Esquimalt-raised Brophy plays washtub bass — "a very basic instrument," he puns — in an unofficial trio unofficially called the Street Dirt Band.

He teamed up about six weeks ago with Iain MacIntyre (banjo) and Dave Harris (guitar and harmonica), both from Ontario, and they play North American traditional music with gusto and no small talent.

* * *

"You get to know half of Victoria doing this," grinned the bearded Brophy from under his broad, floppy-brimmed leather hat.

"It's a lot more fun than playing on the stage because we can have a one-to-one relationship."

The group usually puts in about four hours per day but the members prefer not to reveal how much they earn. Brophy stresses, however, that it's not nearly enough to live on.

MacIntyre says older people are usually the most generous.

Often they receive requests to play specific songs or melodies and, if they're familiar with the piece, they oblige.

Shaking his head in some disbelief, MacIntyre recalled that he was once asked if he knew Danny Boy.

Over on Douglas, outside Eaton's, loner Murray Drew, 26, entertains shoppers on banjo, playing, in his words, popular music from the mid-1800s to the 1950s.

Drew has been a downtown minstrel for six years, his routine and hours depending largely on the weather. He used to enjoy it more than he does now, he said, one reason being that there are more musicians around these days and it's harder to find a good location.

Drew said he has had occasional hassling from some merchants but otherwise his biggest problem is the opposition.

"If other people are in the place you want to be, you get to know their hours and make sure you get there before them. You have to try to outwit them."

'Scream Bloody Murder' On Food Costs: NDP Critic

OTTAWA (CP)-Canadians should "scream bloody murder" until the government rolls back recent supermarket price increases, says Lorne Nystrom, New Democratic party food critic.

Nystrom, just back from his riding of Yorkton-Melville in rural Saskatchewan, told reporters Friday the supermarkets and processors — not farmers — are responsible for the dramatic increase in meat prices reported by Statistics Canada this week.

He rejected as futile and ridiculous Finance Minister Jean Chretien's advice that consumers shop around for cheaper alternatives to high-priced foods.

Chretien made this suggestion in Montreal Wednesday, hours after learning the consumer price index for June had jumped by 0.9 per cent to an annual level of 9.2 per cent.

"The government is not responsible for your buying habits," he said. "If cabbage is too expensive for you, buy something else.

The main culprit was the price of beef, up 70.3 per cent over its level one year earlier.

Nystrom said supermarkets and food processors are taking advantage of this situation by increasing the price of beef substitutes.

He said chicken prices have gone up 25 per cent and sausage prices have jumped 75 per cent in the last year, while farm prices for these products have increased by just six per cent.

"Obviously there is profiteering and the government should step in and roll back prices," he said.

UNIT LABOR COST TELLS ALL: RENOUF

OTTAWA (CP) — The key to Canada's economic performance over the next two years is control over unit labor costs, Harold Renouf, anti-inflation board chairman says.

Renouf said in a pre-taped interview with Standard Broadcast News released today that the rate of increase in unit labor costs has come down dramatically in the last few years.

But it will take time, he said, for the lower costs to have an impact on the economy.

"It takes a short period of time to escalate inflation. It takes years, rather than months, to decelerate it."

Renouf said there will probably be another substantial increase in food prices this month according to Statistics Canada's consumer price index.

But he added that there should be some moderation in August.

Lab Loses Vaccine Lawsuit

OTTAWA (CP) — An attempt by Connaught Laboratories Ltd., Toronto, to have the federal government pay $1,868,430 for bulk swine flu vaccine Connaught bought from Glaxo Canada Ltd. in 1976 was thrown out Friday by the Federal Court of Canada.

Mr. Justice Alex Cattanach, in a written judgment, said the issue of whether Connaught is obligated to pay Glaxo should be settled first.

The federal government in 1976 contracted to have Connaught supply 12 million doses, worth more than $12 million, of vaccine against swine flu. About 9.5 million doses were supplied and paid for before the program was stopped by Ottawa in January, 1977.

Meanwhile, bulk vaccine bought by Connaught from Glaxo was rejected by Ottawa "due to excess turbidity".

The accepted vaccine had been supplied by others than Glaxo.

Inuit Rallies Slated

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The president of the Committee for Original Peoples' Entitlement (COPE) said Friday a series of community meetings will be held in the next four weeks to discuss an interm land-claims settlement with Ottawa.

Sam Raddi, whose organization represents about 2,500 Inuit in the Western Arctic, said meetings will be held in Sachs Harbour, Holman Island, Paulatuk, Tuktoyaktuk, Inuvik and Aklavik. The agreement was announced by Northern Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner in Ottawa earlier in the day.

Raddi said he does not expect much opposition from people in the communities to proposals outlined in the interim agreement.

"This paper has been put together from the people we have interviewed in the past three years," he said. "It would be very hard to change it again because . . . 14,000 interviews have made this paper."

Meat Men Appeal

TORONTO (CP) — A joint appeal has been filed by 2,300 locked-out Canada Packers Ltd. employees with the Unemployment Insurance Commission seeking to overturn a ruling that disqualifies the workers from benefits.

Chris Richards, employment manager with Local 114 of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union, said the union was formally notified Friday that its workers, who have been locked out since June 22, are not eligible for benefits.

He said the ruling was based on a commission regulation that denies benefits to any person who is out of work because of a labor dispute.

Canada Packers and its meat-packing rival, Swift Canadian Ltd., have an agreement that if employees of one company go on strike, the other will lock its workers out. Swift's employees are on strike.

Air Traffic Plan Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's proposal to cut some air traffic control services as an economic measure will jeopardize the safety of airline passengers, the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association said Friday.

Association president Jim Livingston said he has been assured by transport department officials that no controllers will lose their jobs.

"Our concerns are based solely on what professional air traffic controllers see as a needless exposure of aircraft and passengers to greatly increased hazards at some of Canada's major airports," Livingston said in a news release.

"While control tower services are to be discontinued during late night hours at St. John's, Halifax, Moncton, Quebec City, Montreal (Dirval), Ottawa, Edmonton International and Victoria, the airports themselves will remain open and the air traffic control service will be replaced by advisory services provided by radio operators at these locations," Livingston said.

"In our opinion, the cost saving effected by these shutdownw is far outweighed by the consequent degradation in safety."

A transport department spokesman said earlier this month the annual saving would be about $1 million if air control tower operations were reduced at a number of airports during the quiet hours.

"We are not proposing closing the airports, but only proposing to use air radio rather than controllers from midnight to six in the morning," the transport official said.

Charlottes Hotspot Gov't Told

Charlottes are the most important "hotspot" in B.C. because the situation is "already attracting media attention, and are of interest all over the province. Their environmental and esthetic appeal makes them an ideal subject for large urban audiences.

"Major environmental groups, professors of anthropology and Indian rights groups are vehemently expressing their concern about logging practices and land-use values there."

The report says the Islands "have a position roughly analogous to Newfoundland in the minds of the public. It's one of those places where some quintessence of humanity seems concentrated, and arouses intense feelings even by those who have never set foot on the Islands."

The report delves into the ministry's communications problems with the public, media and industry. It says ministry personnel have much to learn about dealing with various groups, especially special interest groups such as recreation associations and environmental organizations.

It says one of the most important things the ministry can do is identify its various audiences and understand them.

"Otherwise, the ministry is going to wallow helplessly in a sea of confusion and misunderstanding about its role and intentions."

The consultants also advise that the ministry's image is suffering largely because it is confused with industry.

The report says the linking of the ministry and the forest industry in the public eye goes back a long way.

"This confusion has historical roots. No attempt was made to disassociate the ministry's image from industry in the past. The ministry was made industry's butler."

The document goes on to say that a survey showed that "for many personnel, particularly those in public involvement, this confusion has become an embarrassment. It is painful to their professional pride."

The report concludes with more than 70 recommendations for improving the ministry's communications function.

Some of them are:

— A policy should immediately be established defining the difference between operational and political information.

— District public information officers should be appointed for each forest district.

— The present information division should be extensively reorganized.

— The ministry should find out as much as possible about its major audiences and establish their information and communication needs.

— Forestry offices should have a less militaristic appearance, and more casual uniforms should be adopted.

U.S. Eyes Spy Trade-Off

"We're continuing working," Michael Stiglitz said in a telephone interview from Jerusalem. "The protests of these days will look like nothing."

Mrs. Shcharansky's trip to the U.S. is sponsored by Scientists for Shcharansky, a group formed last week. She was to meet Monday with Vice President Walter Mondale and 50 members of Congress.

Two of the strongest congressional reactions came from New York's senators, Jacob K. Javits and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who are co-chairmen of a committee to free Shcharansky.

Javits called the trials of Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg, who drew a term of eight years for anti-Soviet agitating and propaganda, "an international disgrace and an affront to humankind . . . an insult to the word of the president of the United States . . . and an affront to the basic morality of the civilized world."

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday the sentencing of Russan dissidents undoubtedly will have serious implications for detente.

In a toughly worded statement, the prime minister said he is deeply disappointed with the sentencing of the dissidents.

Trudeau also reiterated a long-standing Canadian offer to allow Shcharansky to move to Canada if he is allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

"Those who are shedding these tears shall be reminded that by defending the spy, traitor and slanderer they are smearing themselves)ith the dirt into which Shcharansky plunged up to his ears," Soviet television and newspapers said.

Shcharansky was found guilty of supplying state secrets to U.S. intelligence — a charge denied by Carter — and of distributing anti-government materials under the guise of promoting human rights.

Also in the news was the publication by the Soviets of a quiet legal notice stripping exiled nonconformist artist Oskar Rabin of his Soviet citizenship.

Rabin, 50, was given a six-month exit visa last January and has been living in Paris most recently.

A gazette of decrees of the leadership of the Supreme Soviet, the country's nominal parliament, announced that Rabin had been stripped of his citizenship in a ruling dated June 23 and signed by President Leonid Brezhnev.

Bonn Meet Big for PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, stymied at home in his attempts to resolve serious inflation and unemployment, will be looking for some international solutions when he meets six other Western leaders in Bonn.

Trudeau will meet Sunday and Monday with leaders of Japan, United States, West Germany, Britain, France and Italy. The summit will be followed up by a three-day official visit to West Germany and talks with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

There is expected to be some tough bargaining with the Europeans and Japan to convince them to open their doors wider to foreign products. And there will be strong pressure on the U.S. to cut its massive trade deficit by reducing its oil imports.

For Trudeau, who must call an election by next spring, better health for Canada's major trading partner to the south and more opportunities to sell goods abroad would help get the lagging Canadian economy moving again.

Trudeau has consistently pointed his finger abroad as the reason for this country's economic difficulties.

As a major trading nation which exports about one half of what it produces, Canada's prosperity depends on the strength of the world economy.

There have been complaints that West Germany and Japan have not kept their agreement to buy more foreign products.

Crash Kills Nanaimo Man

NEW METHOD ENDS SMOKING FOR LIFE

RESEARCHED AT U.B.C.

Recently published results of research at U.B.C. report on a new, simple, pleasant way to end smoking permanently. Proven effective for even heavy smokers, smoking can be ended easily in just 24 hours without drugs, discomfort or weight gain. The new method now available in Victoria is called R.E.S.T. Fight City Hall? He Pulled It Off

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Restaurateur Just Refused To Clam Up And It Finally Paid Dividends

He wasn't fast talking and he wasn't slick but A.J. Adair this week fought city hall and won.

Mind you, it was a minor skirmish.

Adair is a local restaurateur (actually he runs a juice bar) who was one of the first to bid for a hawker's licence when council decided to allow street vendors on the Inner Harbor causeway this summer.

Adair, who runs the Thirsty Pony, wanted to set up a cart selling sauteed clams and shrimps. But when he found out the price of shrimps he decided to make that clams and oysters.

For weeks Adair tried to get his application before council, but there was one detour after another. First he was told to get department of health approval for his plan.

He did. Then city hall told him to get an okay from the fire department, because nobody wanted to see clams and oysters flambe, especially all over a crowd of tourists.

The fire department looked at his plans and gave him the green light.

Finally Adair was back at city hall with all the paper work done. Letters had been written, plans had been approved by just about everybody, and he'd even spent several hundred dollars getting a clam and oyster cart built and training an operator.

Then the roof fell in.

While Adair had been running hither and thither, city council had a change of mind about street vendors. There had been a deluge of applications, so it was decided to end things before they got chaotic.

The ice-cream man got a licence and so did the hot sausage lady and a few others — but that was it. No more.

And so when Adair's application finally came up before the licensing committee last week the hearing was short and sweet.

There would be no hot clams or oysters for hungry tourists or anybody else prowling Victoria's streets.

Clams, whether they came with shrimps or oysters, would just not be allowed.

City hall had spoken.

But Adair wasn't about to take that sitting down, and Thursday he stood up before council and said he'd got a raw deal.

☆ ☆ ☆

He said his first letter had gone to council on March 6, long before most of the other street vendors had applied.

He also said he'd spent a lot of money on his hot clam and oyster cart, "because nobody ever said I wouldn't get a licence."

When one alderman pointed out that nobody had ever said he would get a licence Adair replied: "I took a gamble, yes, but I had no other choice."

He said if he'd waited for council to make up its mind before starting to work on his cart, he'd have just managed to get it built in time to wave good-bye to the last boatload of tourists.

Adair told his story and shrugged. What more could he say?

Finally, Ald. Murray Glazier rose on behalf of the juice bar operator who wanted to branch out into hot clams and oysters.

"He was one of the first people to get working on this," said Glazier, "and his application was delayed in coming to committee through no fault of his own. I intend to support this application."

When it came to the crunch so did the rest of the aldermen. Adair got his licence, even though a city bylaw had to be changed to allow it.

And so Adair will join the rest of the entrepreneurs on the Causeway in jig time.

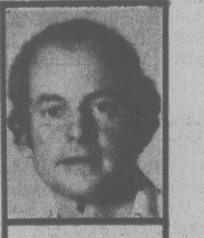
ENERGY PROJECT BUFFETED

The Great Windmill Tilt



max low

Aldermanic attitudes and governmental indifferences are upsetting Derrick Mallard even more than the tightness of all their purse strings.

Derrick is president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment (CASE) which has been trying to rustle up support for an alternative energy demonstration project here that will see, among other things, construction of two large windmills.

Not surprisingly, CASE has met with little support financially.

After applying twice and being turned down twice for Canada Works Program grants last year, the group was offered $14,759 by the federal department of energy, mines and resources. But that was mostly to cover wages of a project leader and five others. Only $1,100 of that was to be allocated for "overheads."

Well, as CASE reckoned overheads — which include costs of travel, telephone and mailing as well as all materials — would be around $5,000, they decided to turn the federal offer down.

"But, when the provincial government's B.C. Energy Commission showed interest and indicated they would support us financially as well, we decided to accept the federal funds," Mallard explains.

CASE fired off an application for $7,500 to the BCEC and sat back to wait for the funds.

But when Derrick got back from Ottawa, there was a letter from the BCEC saying 'No' and James Hill, energy co-ordinator for renewable resources, said merely that "it may be possible for us to contribute a much smaller amount at a later stage."

"Hill subsequently indicated on the telephone to me that the 'much smaller amount' might be around $1,000 which they might give us after we've got something built that they can see," Derrick says. "But that's what we need the $1,000 for — before the fact, not after it!"

With this change in support, CASE was then faced with the decision of scrapping the whole project or trying to raise the funds — about another $9,500 — locally. They decided to try.

"Well, we believe that on this southern tip of Vancouver Island the potential for wind power or a combination of wind and solar power is extremely good," Mallard points out. "There is a possibility of forming a profit-sharing company that could manufacture, assemble and install solar and wind systems. Such a company would be a viable economic proposition for Victoria and would provide employment."

But are others here as excited as CASE at the prospects? Very few, it seems.

Articles in both city dailies brought numerous phone calls offering moral support but, as Derrick says, zero dollars.

And so he went to the municipal councils and only North Saanich came through with a donation of $250.

Central Saanich heaped praise on CASE but kept its purse closed. Sidney, Esquimalt and Oak Bay all turned thumbs down and Saanich still has to deal with the request next Wednesday night.

"At Victoria City Hall, Ald. Robin Blencoe moved that they give us $1,000 but the council turned that down," says Derrick.

"The whole thing is such short-sighted policy," he adds. "Here are the Americans spending millions of dollars on research for alternate energy systems. They'll be producing them and marketing them in a few years and we'll be buying them! And people in Canada will be asking why we haven't done anything.

"Here we are in Victoria saying we should support the concept of local industry and here is an ideal chance. And what do the bureaucrats do? Nothing!"

Mallard is upset by the poor response from municipalities, business and other organizations in this area. And he's more upset by their attitudes than by their miserliness.

He was made to feel quite uncomfortable, he says, by members of the Victoria council, while Esquimalt aldermen turned CASE down with accompanying flippant remarks and Sidney's rejection came with "scathing comments."

"If these councils are not going to support us financially, at least you'd think they'd support the concept and encourage us," says Derrick.

Thieves Geared For Backgammon

Colwood RCMP have at least one clue in an overnight break-in at a residence at 2480 Millstream — the thieves obviously enjoy a game of backgammon. .

The game was one of several items reported missing by the occupants when they arrived home at 1:30 a.m.

Police said the break-in occurred sometime after 9:30 p.m. Friday and the thieves had to have transportation.

Beside the backgammon set, they took a portable TV, stereo turntable and speakers, a stereo alarm clock, eight-track tape deck, quilt, a man's leather coat, and a small amount of cash. The total loss was about $900.

Owner Lucille Colley is away on holidays and had let the house to some friends.

Police said the thieves smashed a window and reached in to unlock the front door.

PLAYING NEAR-FLAWLESS GOLF on old course of St. Andrews in Scotland today, Jack Nicklaus (above) won British Open championship by two-shot margin over four rivals, including unheralded New Zealander Simon Owen, who lost lead on 16th hole when he took bogey and Nicklaus collected birdie. Nicklaus had three-under-par 69 today and finished 72-holes with 281.

Jack Nicklaus Surges To Third British Crown

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Jack Nicklaus conquered the tough and ancient Old Course at St. Andrews and withstood a challenge by unheralded Simon Owen today to win the British Open golf championship.

Nicklaus played flawless golf in gaining his 15th major championship, touring the 6,933-yard course with three birdies and 15 pars for a final-round, three-under-par 69 and a winning 72-hole total of seven-under-par 281.

It had looked like Nicklaus might have had to settle for his second consecutive runner-up finish in this famed event. With three holes to play, he was six under par and a stroke back of Simon, the New Zelander who had shot into the lead with four birdies in the first six holes on the back nine.

Then on the 16th, Nicklaus sank an eight-foot put for a birdie three, while Owen went through the green with his second shot and had to settle for a costly bogey five.

Nicklaus parred the final two holes to win.

Four strokes behind Nicklaus at 285 were Isao Aoki of Japan, Nick Faldo of Britain, Bob Shearer of Australia and John Schroeder of the U.S.

Defending champion Tom Watson lost his chance of retaining his title, which would have given him three British Opens in four years, by bogeying four consecutive holes on the opening nine on the way to a four-over-par 76 and a 287 total. Japan's Masashi Ozaki and American Mark Hayes also finished with 287.

Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, a co-leader after the second round, closed out his bid with a 73 for 288 and must still wait for his first major tournament victory.

It was Nicklaus' third British Open crown and his first major victory since the U.S. PGA in 1975. The longest he has ever gone without a major title was a three-year period that ended in 1970 with his second British Open crown, also at St. Andrews.

The victory goes with three U.S. Open championships, four PGA titles and five Masters green jackets. He is the only man to win all four of the major titles at least three times. Gary Player of South Africa, who won the Masters this year, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen are the only other men to win them all.

Owen, who had taken a one-stroke lead at seven under par with birdies on four of the first six holes on the back nine, faded badly at the end. He had bogeys on the 16th and 17th, but parred No. 18 for a total of 283 and a share of second place, two strokes behind Nicklaus.

Also at 283 were Ray Floyd, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite.

VISTAS ADD TO STREAK BY THUMPING SELECTS

Vancouver Island Vistas are still undefeated and crowding the leaders in the Pacific Northwest Soccer League today.

Vistas Friday night trimmed the B.C. Selects 7-3 at Royal Athletic Park to move within one point of leading Pegasus. Vistas have won five games and tied three and have a game in hand on Pegasus.

Steve Carroll got Vistas even on a pass from Frank Woods at nine minutes and by the half Vistas enjoyed a 4-1 advantage.

Vistas scored three goals in an 11-minute span. John Leier converted a Peter Zachary pass, Ray Telford scored on a header from Woods and Mark Robb scored on a rebound on a shot by Leier.

John, Connors and Ranjesh Singh scored the other Selects' goals.

Vistas have two away games remaining, one with Pegasus and one with the Whitecap Reserves. However there is a chance the Whitecap game may be played here next week.

Did News of Help Inspire Mussels?

EUGENE, Ore. — Word must have gotten out early that Victoria Mussels were going to get help from Los Angeles Dodgers.

Because certainly the Mussels flashed their most-devastatating offensive display in one inning here Friday as they scored 10 runs in the 10th frame for a 12-2 victory over Eugene Emeralds in a Northwest League baseball game before a crowd of 1,225.

As for the player help, it is coming from Los Angeles in the form of four players, as yet unnamed but including an infielder, a speedy outfielder and two pitchers, one rightanded and one lefthanded.

Mussels and the Dodgers have a player co-operation pact.

General-manager Lynn Chapman of the Mussels said the new players will be joining the club sometime this weekend and definitely will be with the club when it returns home to meet Grays Harbor Loggers, Tuesday.

In the game, Mussels' playing manager Jim Chapman hit his first home run of the season to give the Mussels a 2-1 lead in the eighth inning and then singled in the 10th to drive in the tie-breaking run.

The Mussels' outbreak in the 10th began when Charlie Lord, a newcomer, reached base on an error. Pinch-runner Roy Moretti advanced to third when Steve Kasunic's attempted sacrifice was misplayed. Chapman followed with his game-winning single. Later Al Alplaugh hit a three-run double and the Emeralds were done in.

Shortstop Hector Rinconez of the Emeralds made three errors to aid the Mussels cause.

Dave Cheadle got the win for the Mussels. He pitched the final two innings, gave up four bases on balls, struck out three and didn't allow a hit.

Dale Mahorcic started for the Mussels and was relieved by Brian Peterson in the eighth when Emeralds tied the game.

It was the Mussels' second win on the road.

The Scuffed-Ball Case

By The Associated Press

It takes 75 words in the rule book to explain why Don Sutton faces a 10-day suspension from pitching for Los Angeles Dodgers.

The 33-year-old righthander was accused and convicted of throwing a defaced baseball to the St. Louis's Mike Tyson in the seventh inning of a 4-1 Cardinals victory Friday night. That decision, by umpiring crew chief Doug Harvey, left Sutton insisting he'd go to court to defend himself as an innocent victim of rule 3.02.

"I'm not saying anything—I'm going to file suit," said Sutton after being ejected from the contest, maintaining Harvey was "depriving me of my rights to earn a living as a pitcher."

Harvey claimed Sutton's rights had little to do with the matter. Rules are rules, and 3.02 says—in Harvey's words—"The pitcher shall not pitch an emoryball, a spitball or an otherwise defaced baseball. If he does throw one, he must be ejected from the game and the pitch called a ball."

"At no time did I ever infer that Sutton had marked the ball," said Harvey. But someone had, and the rule states that if the actual culprit cannot be determined, 'and if the pitcher delivers such discolored or damaged ball to the batter, the pitcher shall be removed from the game at once and shall be suspended automatically for 10 days.' "

"Doug, this ball's been scuffed," said Crawford to Harvey. "Hang onto it and we'll look at it later," said Harvey to Crawford.

They looked again at the end of the sixth, when Los Angeles centre fielder Bill North caught the final out and rolled it to Harvey.

"I noticed it was marked the same way as the first one. That's when I went to (Dodger manager Tom) Lasorda and told him, 'Tom, somebody's doing something to the baseball.' Tom said that Sutton wasn't doing it. I said, 'Hey. Someody is.'"

So, after Sutton got Tyson on a fly ball for the apparent final out of the Cardinals' seventh, Harvey went into action.

Sutton was ejected, the Dodgers were sent back onto the field, Tyson was recalled to the plate, a ball was added to the count and left-hander Lance Rautzhan retired Tyson officially.

Lasorda, equally upset and amazed, said: "I've never seen that in my life. I just can't see how the man (Harvey) takes it upon himself to be the judge and juror in taking my man out of the game. There's no difference between that ball and any other ball."

That will be decided by National League officials. The ball sat in a plastic bag on Harvey's desk in the umpire's room at Busch Memorial Stadium, and that ball, Harvey said, bore "a small scuff mark."

"There was no doubt in my mind it had been messed with."

Timing Was Just Great For Fort Tilden and Bud

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

It might be said that they ran the wrong race as the feature on the Friday night harness racing program at Sandown Raceway. At least Bud Michell would agree.

Bud Michell is a well-known Saanich and lower Island personality, a farmer by profession and a horse lover by avocation; and, more to the point, he is also a horse owner. That's his new bent.

And it all came about because Bud wanted to get involved when he heard the harness people were thinking of coming to the Island. Matter of fact he went out of his way to help Jim Keeling and company make the move over here from Cloverdale.

So he thought why not be a part of it. It would be something to do in his retirement.

Thus the die was cast and he and unnamed friends bought a pacer the better to indentify with the sport, Bud being a thoroughbred horse player of more than passing renown before then.

The pacer was Fort Tilden, a seven-year old bay horse, and the deal was made when Fort Tilden was in Calgary. And Fort Tilden was a winner in his very first start for the new owners.

Came the move here by the standardbreds and all Bud's friends flocked to admire and wager on the new addition to Brynmor Farm.

Well, Fort Tilden didn't exactly disappoint, but he didn't win either, while running against better, and not until Friday.

And this was it for Bud — a win at home, a proud moment and all his friends got even. Well at least he hopes so.

Fort Tilden, driven by Keith Linton, did it up more proudly than just winning the sixth race, however. For the time of the races for the Cd-4 event was a quick 2:05, just two ticks off the track record.

And that was 1 4/5 seconds faster than Steady Nick won the featured preferred event later in the evening.

Actually, Fort Tilden, who paid $4.00, $3.10 and $2.20, haq been good to Bud an his partners. He has had two firsts, three seconds, one third and two fifths in eight races; and, as the payoff runs to the first five finishers, Bud is enjoying his new life.

In the feature, Steady Nick, a nine-year old bay horse driven by Jim Mohorich, had to be steady to win a photo from Excel B Mac. Steady Nick paid $6.00, $3.40 and $3.20.

Linton had two others winners, Paul Bruiser ($3.20) in the first and Callaghan ($6.30) in the seventh and that puts him a tie with Dave Jungquist, each with 28 winners for the meeting.

Jungquist had one winner, Biffy Brooke ($37.00) in the fourth.

Callaghan was the front end of the best exactor price of the evening, combining with Prairie Bandit for $183.50. Biffy Brooke and Spindrift Two were the next best, $165.00.

The handle of $98,511 was a record for a weekday, the $13,000 bet on the seventh race was a new mark and the average of close to $11,000 for the nine races, a high for the meeting. The crowd was 1,523. Racing resumes Monday post time 5:55 p.m.

BUDGETS TACKLE LEAGUE LEADERS

Victoria Budgets will be facing an uphill struggle tonight in the first of two doubleheaders against Seattle Peterbilt at Royal Athletic Park.

In addition, pitcher Graham Arnold tops the league list with a 6-1 record and a .857 average.

The two teams meet in another doubleheader starting at 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

Layritz, Gordon Head, Lakehill Reach Final

Four finalists are set with two places still open in the annual Greater Victoria Little League championships which open at Lambrick Park Monday.

Layritz defeated Triangle 10-5 at Hillside, Lakehill whipped Central Saanich 14-4 at Hollywood Park and Gordon Head defeated Hampton 12-2 at Hampton.

Hampton is out but Central Saanich and Triangle had a second chance today. Triangle was matched against Esquimalt and Saanich against Sidney, with the winners to also qualify.

Jamie Porpacey set the pattern for Lakehill when he homered to lead off a six-run second inning. Mike House and Bill Haddow each hit two-run doubles. Robert Kutzner pitched a two-hitter.

Jerry Burton had a double and single and drove in two runs, and Blaine Massey had two singles and scored twice for Layritz.

Jeff Plecas pitched the victory for Gordon Head and had a double and two singles to lead the hitters.

In the Carnarvon Pony League 13-year old tournament at Carnarvon, Layritz edged Carnarvon 8-7, but Carnarvon avoided elimination with a 7-6 victory over Burien.

Layritz took a 5-0 lead, saw Carnarvon battle back to tie the score 7-7 in the sixth, and then won it in the seventh.

Carnarvon spotted Burien a 5-0 lead and then rallied for the win. Warren Mar scored the winning run in the seventh. He walked, stole second, went to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a passed ball.

The defeat eliminated Burien and West Vancouver eliminated Capilano with a 4-2 victory. Layritz played Renton today and Carnarvon met West Vancouver. A third game was scheduled for 6 p.m.

Spinal Surgery For Turcotte

NEW YORK (AP) — Canadian jockey Ron Turcotte, injured in a fall during a race at Belmont Park, was listed in satisfactory condition following emergency neurosurgery at New York University Hospital, a hospital official reported.

The operation—performed by Dr. Vallo Benjamin, a neurosurgeon, and Dr. Gordon Engler, an orthopedic surgeon—attempted to relieve the pressure being exerted on the spinal column by a broken vertabra.

Dr. John Kilgallin, a physican with the New York Racing Association, said the extent of injury to the Grand Falls, N.B., native could not be determined yet, adding that the threat of paralysis did exist.

The 36-year-old jockey, who guided Secretariat to the Triple Crown in 1973, fell during the featured eighth race Thursday when his mount Flag of Leyete Gulf clipped heels of Water Malone after leaving the starting gate. Flag of Layete Gulf fell, throwing Turcotte over her head.

Turcotte, who has been spilled from horses three times this year, has ridden 3,033 winners during his career with purses totalling $28,844,203. He is one of 14 children and has two brothers who are jockeys—Noel and Rudy.

Canada Loses

Roxburgh Bids For Third Straight Title

Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver's Marine Drive course will be seeking a third straight title when 201 golfers tee off Wednesday in the British Columbia amateur championship at Uplands Golf Club.

Roxburgh, who also took the Canadian Amateur championship in 1974, will have some interesting and talented opposition.

Included in the entrants, representing 53 clubs, are six players from the United States, two from Alberta and one from Kuala Lampur.

Among Roxburgh's challengers are Dave Mick, the Island Open and Victoria City Amateur champion from Royal Colwood, John Russell and Don Griffiths of Vancouver's Point Grey, Jeff Wylie and Aren Frederiksen of Nanaimo, Dick Zokol and Harry White of Marine Drive, Brian Christie Sr. and his two sons, Brian Jr. and Blair, of Seymour and Bill Hobbis, a former Victorian now residing in Calgary.

The top 20 and ties in the four-day, 72-hole affair will be granted entries to the B.C. invitational July 29 at Squamish and July 30 at Quilchena.

Scores from the four rounds of the amateur and the two rounds of the invitational will be used to select British Columbia's Willingdon Cup team.

Seymour will be defending the Hamber Cup team trophy during the first 36 holes of the B.C. Amateur, which will also serve as qualifying rounds for non-exempt contestants hoping to enter the Canadian amateur championship, Aug. 23-26, in Laval Sur-le-Lac, Que. A score of 151 or better qualifies a contestant to submit an entry for the national tournament.

Haslam Settles For Third

SPOKANE — Ron Eaton of Tacoma won the opening race of the International Drivers Challenge series at Spokane Friday night by edging Tim Williamson of Seaside, Calif., and Roy Haslam of Victoria in a thrilling finish.

Don Dowdy of Yakima set a track record of 17.62 seconds in the time trials, Haslam won the "A" trophy dash and Dave Dalby of Victoria, making his first start of the season, took the "B" dash.

The series continues tonight at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash., and moves to Victoria, Tuesday and Thursday.

Track Trials For Games

A 30-member team — 15 girls aged 13-14 and 15 boys aged 14-15 — will be selected following a track and field meet, which started today at Centennial Stadium, to represent Vancouver Island at the British Columbia Summer Games Aug. 16-20 in Penticton.

The meet resumes at 12 noon Sunday and concludes about 5 p.m.

BURNSIDE BOWLERS WIN, LOSE

VANCOUVER — It was a win and a loss for Burnside bowlers in the opening round of the B.C. women's triples competition Friday at Stanley Park.

Jessie Kinneard, Marie Sage and Flora Martin defeated the Ann Watson trio of Stanley Park 22-15, but Marg Atherton, Leona Peterson and Ivy McLeod lost to Jean Welsh of Stanley Park 26-9.

Allie Ecles of Vancouver defeated Peggy Wayne of Stanley Park 32-3 in the other match.

Sandra Earns Title

Moss Friday ended the upset ways of Val Brice with a 6-1, 6-3 victory in the final at the Oak Bay Tennis Club.

Brice, who had upset first-seed Enid Jackson in the singles and paired w[illegible] Ta[illegible]a Ney to eliminate the top seed in the doubles, got a double jolt when she and Ney lost the doubles final to Jackson and Sally Hemeon 6-3, 6-0.

Top-seed Russ Hartley and Marty Taylor advanced to the men's doubles final with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-1 victory over Tony Simnett and John Nichol. Joe Lachmund and Timo Markkanen defeated Bob Hutton and Trevor Jones 6-1, 6-0 in the other semi-final.

Hartley and Jean Shaw moved into the mixed doubles final with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Andrea Wiles and Pete Crawford. Lori Barlow and Scott Braley won by default fron Taylor and Ruth Beck when Beck took ill.

Hartley conceivably could win three titles as earlier he qualified to meet Art Hobbs in the men's singles final.

JOIN PGA FIELD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rudy Lavares of the Phillipines, Manuel Pinero of Spain and Jack Kay of the Bahama Islands have confirmed entry in the 1978 Canadian Professional Golfers Association championship tournament here Aug. 15-20.

SHAME
SHAME
SHAME! ! !

That the Victoria Riding Academy has been given the boot!

They have been denied an anticipated grant (to help them move) by the B.C. Government, and have received insufficient influence and encouragement from Oak Bay and Saanich. Many youths, some who now weep at this loss, are denied this fine recreational activity. Many adults join them in their sadness.

It is to this community's shame that the Carleys (who have, for fifty-two years devoted themselves unselfishly to the training and enjoyment of many) and their fine horses, are to be evicted. The Carleys' hopes of being able to leave this heritage behind them for future generations have been shot down.

There is more at stake here than the almighty dollar.

It is a shame that all political parties failed to see and/or speak up about the need to continue and expand such a recreation facility, which, beside anything else, helps young people and keeps them off the street.

Despite a grant refusal, let's put it together . . .

Please clip this coupon and mail to "Save the Academy" Box 534 Victoria Press Ltd.

Builders Better With Their Hits

That was the main story of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park Friday.

The Builders turned five hits into seven runs, while Ingraham could manage only one run on four hits as the Builders scored a 7-1 victory.

The big blows were by Pat Duncan, a two-run homer — and Warren Campbell, a two-run double. Toss in a four walks, a hit batsman and an Ingraham error and the task was that much easier for Bob Fletcher, who pitched the victory.

Bob Butler and Greg Smith each batted in one run for Remco in the fifth. Al Mann tripled and scored on another single by Butler in the seventh.

Parker Champion

WINNIPEG (CP) — Billy Parker of Winnipeg dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on the first extra playoff hole Friday to capture the Manitoba Amateur golf championship.

Parker, 21, had finished in a deadlock with two-time champion Steve Bannatyne of Winnipeg after the 72-hole four-day competition. Both closed with 299 totals.

Cooke Tops White To Take B.C. Title

COQUITLAM (CP) —Lynn Cooke of Coquitlam won the British Columbia women's amateur golf championship Friday by defeating Valerie White of Vancouver 4 and 3 in the 36-hole final.

The 22-year-old Vancouver Golf and Country Club member was one under par over her home course layout against White and she had seven birdies in the 33 holes played. The course played to par 74 over 6,150 yards.

Cooke was 1-up on White at the turn and the 23-year-old from Marine Drive in Vancouver never did overtake the leader.

They had advanced to the final Thursday with a pair of stunning upsets. Cooke eliminated Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver, eight times B.C. champion, 4 and 3, while White stopped Gail Moore, medalist in qualifying play, 2 and 1.

Ironically, Cooke will not be a member of the B.C. team which will compete Aug. 7-12 at Fredericton, N.B., for the Canadian inter-provincial team title.

Named to the B.C. team earlier in the week were Moore, Palmer, White and Flo McFall of Richmond. The team was selected using the best four scores from six rounds, including the two qualifying rounds of the B.C. tournament.

Cooke was second to Moore in qualifying rounds—Moore had 145 for 36 holes and Cooke 151—but her four best scores weren't good enough for the provincial team.

Peterson, Andretti Fastest

BRAND'S HATCH, England (AP) - The flying JPS Lotus racers of Swede Ronnie Peterson and Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., broke the lap record for the Brand's Hatch circuit Friday in opening qualifying trials and earned the provisional front row for Sunday's British Grand Prix.

Peterson knocked almost two seconds off the record for the 2.16-mile circuit to win the pole position and a special prize of 100 bottles of champagne.

Peterson's time of one minute, 17.16 seconds beat the fastest qualifying lap at the circuit by John Watson of 1:19.05 seconds in a non-championship race last year. Andretti was timed in 1:17.83.

Cowan Takes Ontario Title

TORONTO (CP) — Gary Cowan of Kitchener Westmount won the Ontario amatory was not as easy as expected.

Cowan, who fired an even-par 72 on the last 18 for a four-round total of 285, had a four-stroke lead going into the final day but was forced into an extra hole by Rod Spittle of Niagara Falls.

Dale, Nancy All Even

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Kathy Postlewait birdied three of the last four holes to match Janet Anderson's four-under-par 68 to share the opening round lead Friday in an $85,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

The two non-winners were one shot in front of the pack and three strokes ahead of rookie sensation Nancy Lopez, bidding for her eighth victory of 1978.

In a logjam for third place at 69, three under par over the 6,625-yard Riviera Country Club, were youngsters Vicki Fergon, Cathy Mant, Betsy King and Shannon Johnson, all seeking their first tour triumphs.

Lopez posted a 71, the same score as defending champion JoAnne Carner and Dale Shaw of Victoria, who had her best round since joining the pro tour.

Canadians Miss By Just One Hit

BISLEY, England (CP) — The Canadian Armed Forces had to settle for second place in shooting for the United Service Challenge Cup by one shot Friday in the annual Bisley shoot.

Team captain Don Ethell congratulated winners, then said his team was bitterly disappointed.

"We were really hoping to get that one," he said.

The winning British team totalled 1,299 out of a possible 1,600, just four points—the value of a single hit—ahead of the Canadians 1,295.

Eric Wright Takes Title

Eric Wright survived a few miseries with short putts Friday on the Royal Colwood course to capture the crown in the annual championship tournament of the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association.

Wright, who had started the 36-hole event with a two-over-par 69 at Cedar Hill Thursday, toured his home layout Friday and carded a seven-over 77 for a 146 total that got him home two shots in front of determined Bill Thompson, the perennial contender for Victoria Golf Club who had his title hopes all but erased when Wright fired a birdie on Friday's 17th hole.

Al Spaight of Glen Meadows collected the other major crown. Spaight, a 16-handicapper, won over-all handicap honors as he posted a net 65 Friday for a two-day total of 122, eight strokes ahead of Bill Walters (168-38 — 130) from Gorge Vale.

George Bigelow fired Friday's best round, a 74, to take handicap laurels for the final day with a net 67, nipping Colwood's Joe Cardy (77-9 — 68) by one stroke.

MEARNS ON TEAM FOR WORLD MEET

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian equestrian team returns to the world jumping championships for the first time since Canada took top honors in 1970.

The Canadian Equestrian Federation says in news release that the team will compete in four European horse shows in August, including the world championships at Aachen, West Germany, Aug. 17 to 20.

The seven-member team also will compete at Hickstead, England, Aug. 3—6; Dublin, Aug. 8—12; and Rotterdam, the Netherlands, Aug. 23—27.

Riders named to the team are: Bo Mearns, 31, of Victoria; Jim Elder, 43, of Aurora, Ont.; Miss Terry Leibel, 24, of Toronto; Ian Millar, 31, of Perth, Ont.; Terrance (Torchy) Millar, 27, of Milton, Ont.; John Simpson, 27, of Cochrane, Alta.; and Peter Stoeckle, 25, of Ottawa.

Chinese Art On Display

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Most admirable of all the arts possessed by a creative person is the art of understatement, of implication and suggestion. Only those few towering geniuses such as Beethoven or Michelangelo can express a gigantic concept in overpowering terms and bring forth an immortal work like the Ninth Symphony and the Sistine Chapel adornment.

Beethoven used every available and related means to give ultimate expression to spiritual joy in the choral finale of the Ninth. The lesser and later genius, Tchaikovsky, went to other lengths to achieve a sense of overwhelming triumph in the 1812 Overture. Such excesses of emotion, when attempted by many composers of inferior gifts, however, have resulted in mere musical hyperbole.

At the other end of the scale and stirring our senses as much — some people feel more poignantly — are the composers and artists who crystalize a philosophy, a thought, an emotion through the most spare and sensitive economy of means. The French school of composers has provided many such: Debussy, Ravel, Faure, Poulenc, to name a few. Among artists there are none who have such an awareness of the power of understatement as those of the Orient.

In Victoria at the moment there is a show which has not been heralded with any great fanfare but which turns out to be, without question, one of the most delightfully rewarding evolutions of the genius of a single artist this city has hosted in at least a decade.

It's to be seen in the McPherson Playhouse mezzanine lobby for most of this month, but don't dally if great works of art, and especially oriental art, appeal to you, for once gone the likelihood of this artist's work being seen again here soon is remote.

Dr. Richard Liu of Pearson College is responsible for the fact that 59 of Chinese artist and calligrapher L.S. Shaw's works are occupying the Playhouse space.

Shaw, an instructor in Chinese painting in the Department of Extramural Studies, Chinese University of Hong Kong, has been on an American lecture tour, an invited guest to Washington, D.C., and of Indiana University, Yale, and the University of California.

He declined an invitation to exhibit in Toronto because he did not find the city attractive, and at first, when approached by Dr. Liu, was not interested in exhibiting in Victoria. But he came here on a visit and immediately fell under the legendary charm of the island-studded water approach and the city itself. The present exhibition is a witness to his pleasure in Victoria.

As with many oriental painters, his medium is ink, his tools a collection of brushes from those as thick as a wrist, to some having only a few hairs — or possibly he may use a finger or a thumb. Some have taken him as little as two or three minutes to produce; some large multi-panel pieces have been painted with the artist squatting above them as they lay spread on the floor. One of these was sold during his American tour for $6,000. A profoundly meditating Amitabha Buddha, exquisitely simple in its execution, is a finger painting.

Although there are a number of delicately evocative landscapes in the show — look particularly for Kyoto Landscape, one of the larger and most mood-provoking paintings, Gathering at Lan-t'ing, and Sails on an Autumn River, so deceptively simple, so superb in composition and rendering — Shaw's preoccupation is mainly with humanity as reflected in the attitudes and reactions of the ubiquitous Buddhist monks.

We see them drunk and sober; communing spiritually and gobbling greedily; laughing, sleeping, begging, preaching. In two brilliant studies of facial expression we are shown a monk cleaning out an ear to rid himself of the poison of evil speech, another gulping pins probably in some form of penance.

Women appear very seldom but when they do it is with unimaginable elegance and charm. Otherwise there is much ironic humor to be found in the artist's point of view and at the same time a spirituality expressed in a philsosophy that sees and probes the human condition with gentleness and tolerance.

Never at any point does Shaw set down more than is necessary to convey what he has noted. He captures the expression in a body's slump or a set of shoulders with a thick-thin curve, a smudge, a single evocative looping line. By some inspired touch it is always clear whether closed eyes are sleeping or merely veiled in contemplation.

Shaw is also rated as one of the world's finest oriental calligraphers and the present show has a rich representation of his work in this field which, according to Dr. Liu, is slowly but surely a dying art.

Maggie Smith and Brian Bedford in scene from Noel Coward's 'Private Lives' now playing at Stratford Festival in Stratford, Ont. Both are appearing in other Festival productions.

Castle Concert

Recitalist for the Victoria Conservatory of Music faculty series, now concluding for the summer, is Kathleen Solose, who will be heard in a program of piano works on Friday at 8 p.m. at Craigdarroch Castle.

Miss Solose will play an early Beethoven sonata, the Polonaise-Fantasie by Chopin, Sonata by Alban Berg, and Gaspard de la Nuit by Maurice Ravel.

The artist became a member of the Conservatory piano faculty last September upon her return to Canada from Russia, where she completed her diploma at the Moscow Conservatory.

A consistent winner of many competitions, including the Casagrande Competition in Tierne, Italy, she was also recently a finalist in the CBC Talent Festival and recieved much praise for her playing of Chopin.

Admission to the recital is by donation to the Conservatory scholarship-bursary fund.

OUTSIZE BOW or normal beau — which is sweeping Janie Woods Morris off her feet in this scene from Gilbert and Sullivan's mocking Patience? The short and less frequently performed of G and S shows shares a double bill with Pirates of Penzance at McPherson Playhouse, playing Thursdays and Saturdays through Aug. 12. Comic John Heath is the admiring beau in the scene. Wednesday and Friday program by the Four Seasons Musical Theatre features another seldom performed work, Princess Ida, with HMS Pinafore. The operas are abridged.

Festival Opens On Sunday

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A foretaste of pleasures to come throughout the next six weeks was contained in a peliminary concert by Victoria International Festival artists at St. Michael's University School Thursday.

The first of 12 McPherson Playhouse concerts, Sunday at 8 p.m., will officially mark the opening of the festival.

There will be altogether 28 concerts, 16 of them at St. Michael's. The internationally distinguished faculty in residence at St. Michael's, on Richmond Road, for the eighth year of Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts, will appear in 24 of the 28 concerts. The other four are dubbed "Stars of Tomorrow" and will feature many of the more than 200 students from all over the world, registered here this summer.

Presented Sunday will be Yuri Mazurkevich, violinist, with William Aide at the piano, renowned United States pianist Abbey Simon, who is to perform Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata, and the Philadelphia String Quartet, which, as their part of the all-Beethoven program, will perform the G Major Quartet.

Ukrainian-born Mazurkevich, who now resides in Canada, did several years of graduate study under David Oistrakh, and has played many concerts throughout Canada, Europe and the Soviet Union. With his violinist wife Dana as his duo partner, he provided one of the thrills of Thursday's concert at St. Michael's. The duo performed Mozart's Concertante in D with Robin McCabe at the piano, a brilliant evocation of unbelievable precision in the technical and musical mating of the instruments.

A lovely clear and stylistically perfect rendering of Haydn's Quartet in C by the Philadelphia Quartet left listeners looking eagerly forward to again hearing the ensemble on Sunday.

To be heard later in the series of concerts, famed guitarist Mario Escudero appeared Thursday, proving himself one of the top classical and flamenco guitarists of our time in a group of numbers revealing exquisite tonal shadings and a crystal clear technique. Playing four of his own works, he also emerged as a composer of phenomenally high standard.

Ticket information concerning individual concerts or special discounts on a series of any seven, can be obtained from McPherson Playhouse box office or the Festival's centre at St. Michaels by calling 595-2626.

Artistic Uses of Light Tested at Open Space

Open Space Gallery's second collaboratory on the subject of light is offering artists and interested persons the opportunity to experiment in artistic uses for light. Light sources are furnished by the Gallery and ideas for light-sculptures and other "pieces" expressing light as a medium are welcome.

The public may participate in the project, which will continue through various phases until mid-August. Next week's events will deal with images, receptions and shadows with guest artist Mary Arnold. July will end with a week of experiments in the quality of light.

Daily orientation meetings are held at the Gallery, 510 Fort, at 2 p.m., Tuesday through Friday. Visitors can view light sculptures, read project proposals and add their own ideas as well as meeting the guest artists. For further information call Jim Starck at Open Space, 383-8833.

In conjunction with the Light Collaboratory, the Gallery's Videoview is presenting a series of artists' videotape showings. The next will be on Thursday at 8 p.m. when a color tape by Michael MacDonald of Metromedia in Vancouver, entitled Neon Lights, will be shown. The tape presents neon lights and signs around Vancouver in vivid color with musical accompaniment.

Further showings are by Gregg Simpson and Charlie Fox and will be presented at 12:15 p.m. on July 25 and Aug. 1.

The showings are free and for the noon hour events the public may bring lunch. All the tapes are less than a half-hour long. Videoview is made possible through a Canada Council grant.

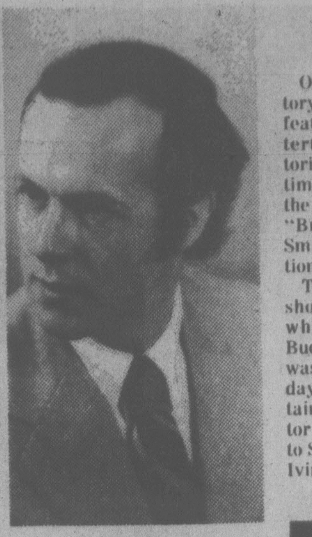
Another happening at Open Space is the Videolab's presentation of a "Beginning Portable Video Workshop". This will take place Saturday, July 22, from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

The workshop will be led by Peggy Cady, director of the Open Space video program, and will provide participants with information and basic skills relating to the use of a Portapack and video camera techniques. This training will enable those seriously interested in video to continue working in the medium through Open Space productions.

Pre-registration is required and may be made in person at Open Space Gallery. The fee is $10 for adults, $6 for Open Space members.

Firebombing Fatal

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Four persons have been arrested in connection with an apparent firebombing that killed an elderly woman and injured 11, including four firemen.



PALMER

City-born Organist Returns

A native Victorian returns to the city next week as the latest guest organ recitalist at St.John's Anglican Church, Quadra. He is David Palmer and he will perform on the fine St.John's organ Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Palmer has established a reputation as a superb recitalist since leaving Victoria some years ago, winning various competitions and performing widely on this continent and in Europe. He is currently on the music faculty of the University of Windsor in Ontario. For his St.John's recital he will perform works by Bach, Durufle, Alain and others.

Palmer began his career as a regular church organist at an early age when he was appointed to St.Paul's Church in Esquimalt. In fact he became noted as one of, if not the youngest church organist in Canada. He was 14 at the time.

Admission to the recital is by purchase of program at the door. General admission is $2, senior citizens, $1.

Star Lords Tour

The Show Carries On

On-going shows and repertory at four locations are a feature of this summer's entertainment scene in Victoria. Among them, the long-time favorite which carries the irresistable tourist tag of "British music hall" is the Smile Show in its new location at the Empress Hotel.

Trouble loomed for the show after only one week when lead comedian Art Budd injured his back and was ordered to bed for a few days. Six hours before curtain time last Tuesday, director Sylvia Hosie put in a call to Smile Show alumnus Steve Ivings.

BUDD
. . . sidelined

Ivings did a quick rehearsal of Budd's numbers and the show went on "without a hitch".

At the Phoenix Theatre on UVic campus, three shows continue to alternate this month. Tonight's offering will be the Feydeau farce, Not Fitting for Ladies, which will be repeated Wednesday and Thursday next week. Billy the Kid, a profane poetic work by Canadian poet Michael Ondaatje, labeled for mature audiences, is playing Monday and Friday and James Barrie's comedy, Dear Brutus, Tuesday and Saturday.

The lively, dance-happy musical, Dames at Sea, continues until Sept. 2 at The Belfry, and at McPherson Playhouse there is Gilbert and Sullivan Abridged — double bills of Pinafore and Princess Ida and Pirates of Penzance with Patience, alternating Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. until Aug. 12.

ROLES CHANGE

people

CHICAGO — Doctors wanted to "pull the plug" on Peter Saraceno two years ago. Today he is healthy, and will walk down the aisle at his wedding Sunday — albeit using a walker.

Saraceno had been critically injured in an auto crash in suburban Bellwood.

Saraceno, 21, was in a coma for 3½ months. He contracted double pneumonia.

"It's going to be the biggest, most joyous Italian wedding on the West Side," his bride-to-be's father said. "They've got 32 people in the wedding party because so many people want to stand up with these two miracle kids."

TORONTO — Robin Phillips, 35, has resigned as artistic director of the Stratford Festival, effective in November.

OTTAWA — Rev. Lawrence Sabatini, 48, of Chicago has been appointed auxiliary bishop of Vancouver by Pope Paul VI.

BRANTFORD, Ont. — Rev. Geoffrey Dean Johnston, 71, member of the Order of the British Empire and former moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, died in hospital here Friday.

CHURCHILL, Man. — Federal Defence Minister Barney Danson says the Canadian Forces base in this northern community will remain open for at least another year while his department studies new uses for the base.

NEW YORK — William A. Leonard, who rose from roving radio reporter to vice president of CBC News and developed the television network's innovative 60 Minutes program, was named Friday to succeed Richard Salant as president of CBS News when Salant retires next April.

SAN FRANCISCO — Retired Army Maj.-Gen. John K. Singlaub, the general called on the presidential carpet for criticizing defence policies, says U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young should get the same treatment.

OXNARD, Calif. — A jury failed in its first day of deliberation Friday to reach a verdict in the drunken driving trial of Howard Jarvis, author of Proposition 13, the California property tax limitation measure.

SAN MATEO, Calif. — A committee has been formed to conduct a campaign aimed at persuading President Carter to commute the federal prison term of Patricia Hearst.

LAGOS, Nigeria — Lt.-Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, moving to end 12 years of military rule by 1979, has eliminated the post of military governor in Nigeria's 19 states and banned politicking until a new constitution goes into effect.

HACKENSACK, N.J. — A New Jersey judge ordered the arrest Friday of New York Times reporter Myron Farber after he failed to obey a court order to turn over his notes in the case of Dr. Mario Jascalevich, a surgeon accused of five patient murders in a case known as the "Dr. X" trial.

MIAMI — Walter Poenisch vowed Friday to monitor the Cuba-to-Florida swim of Diana Nyad, who has called him a "cheat," and has labelled his marathon swim a "gimmick."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — After almost two years of court hearings and months of private and public sqabbling over a property settlement, the divorce of Senator Edward Brooke and his estranged wife, Remigia, is final, ending their 31-year marriage.

WINNIPEG — Col. J. R. Allingham formally assumed command Friday of Canadian Forces Base Winnipeg, replacing Col. D. M. McNaughton.

SASKATOON — Roy Atkinson has announced he will not seek re-election as president of the National Farmers Union.

TOKYO WIVES AWAIT HUBBIES

TOKYO (UPI) — Ninety-two percent of Japanese housewives stay awake every night waiting for their husbands to return home, according to a poll in the monthly magazine, Shopping.

Only eight per cent of the 254 housewives questioned don't wait up for their husbands and go to bed early, the magazine survey said.

EX-ZODIAC DETECTIVE DEFENDED

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Police Department "crucified" former homicide Inspector Dave Toschi in removing him from the Zodiac killer case, Supervisor Dianne Feinstein said Friday.

Toschi worked on the unsolved case for nine years until he was transferred to the pawnshop detail Tuesday. The transfer came after a charge that he had written letters praising himself to a San Francisco Chronicle writer under fictitious names.

Police also reportedly have been trying to determine whether Toschi may have forged letters purportedly from the Zodiac for publicity, which the officer has denied.

Mrs. Feinstein, president of the Board of Supervisors, visited the emotionally exhausted inspector at his home and said the action against him was "appalling."

She also criticized Toschi's superiors for "outrageous police personnel policy" in creating suspicion about the officer by announcing his transfer in a press release — an unusual procedure.

Toschi has admitted he sent three letters praising himself to serial writer Armistead Maupin, but he insisted in newspaper interviews Friday that he had nothing to do with communications from the Zodiac, who left symbols and coded letters as his calling card for frenzied murders in the 1960s.

The case of Zodiac, confirmed killer of six persons between 1966 and 1969 but who claimed 37 slayings in all, has been kept alive by a series of taunting, boasting and cryptic letters.

W.A.C.'s Illness Remains Mystery

KELOWNA (CP) — Former premier W. A. C. Bennett is still in satisfactory condition undergoing tests in Kelowna General Hospital after he suffered what was at first thought to be a stroke, a hospital spokesman said Friday.

Bennett, 77, the father of Premier Bill Bennett, was taken to hospital last Sunday but doctors haven't yet determined what his problem was.

Fare structure biggest threat to Israel tourism

Recent terrorist attacks fail to stem visitor flow

By YUVAL ELIZUR

JERUSALEM — Israel tourism officials are more concerned over the new transatlantic fare structure, which strengthens European competition, than about possible effects of recent terrorist attacks in which tourists were among the victims.

IN FACT, the number of tourists arriving in Israel is still growing remarkably. Seventeen per cent more arrived during the first five months of 1978, compared with the corresponding period last year, despite the fact that the average expansion of tourism the world over is not expected to exceed nine per cent. However, Yoram Blizovsky, director of tourism administration at the ministry of industry, commerce and tourism, admits to a certain uneasiness over prospects for the coming months.

BLIZOVSKY still maintains that his original forecast of 1.2 million tourists for 1978, an increase of 15 per cent over the previous year, will be fulfilled. However, he is also aware of the somewhat disturbing picture of hotel bookings for the coming months when the main bulk of Israel's annual tourism is expected. Robert Richman, manager of the Tel Aviv Sheraton, says advance bookings for the next few months show a definite decline over the same period last year. Tourism is Israel's major source of foreign exchange.

THE ATTACK by Palestinian terrorists on Israelis traveling on the Coastal Road in March, the bomb in a tourist bus in Nablus that killed two German tourists in April, as well as the labor trouble that grounded Israel's national airline for 18 days in April, could endanger the flow of tourists, Blizovsky says. But the biggest immediate threat is cheap transatlantic flights, he emphasizes.

"OUR MAIN worry is that more North Americans will decide this year to go to Europe during the months of July and August when normally a quarter of all our tourists arrive," Blizovsky said in an interview. "We are therefore concentrating our efforts on obtaining a new air fare structure between North America and Israel."

The danger of a slowdown of tourism from North America, source of clients for local four and five-star hotels, has tourism officials and hotel owners worried. Already one can notice a shift in the Israeli tourism map: the number of North American tourists is declining and the number of European visitors is constantly rising.

AT THE SAME time, one could notice last year another shift in the pattern of tourism to Israel. The proportion of Jewish visitors is declining. Before the Six-Day War in June 1967, about 45 per cent of all travellers to Israel were Jews. After the war, when the Old City of Jerusalem, Jerico and other historical places in the West Bank were opened to Jewish visitors, this ratio was reversed. However, under the current trend, Jewish tourists again are becoming the minority.

THESE TWO changes in the pattern of tourism have the same effect: less business for the top hotels, mainly those along Tel Aviv's beach front.

While there is an abundance of rooms in Tel Aviv, where several additional luxury hotels were opened in the past year, there is a shortage of rooms in Jerusalem. The 5,500 rooms in the capital, including those in three and four-star hotels, as well as in hotels in East Jerusalem, cannot handle the growing interest in visiting the Holy City. Tour operators complain that, since they cannot obtain two or three-day bookings for their 10-day package tours of Israel, they are sometimes obliged to forget the package because they cannot sell it without Jerusalem.

FIVE HUNDRED additional hotel rooms are now under construction in Jerusalem and 3,000 more rooms are being planned. Despite generous government subsidies to investors in the form of cheap loans, investors are complaining about red tape in getting their plans approved and the long period needed for construction. Although costs are not estimated to exceed $28,000 per room in five-star hotels, investors maintain that at this level the feasibility of new hotels is highly questionable.

THE SHORTAGE of hotel rooms in Jerusalem is an indication that, despite all efforts made in the past 11 years to develop other areas, Jerusalem, with its holy places and scenic beauty (enhanced in recent years as a result of efforts by indefatigable mayor Teddy Kollek), is still Israel's "big hit.":

In the past three years, however, Israel's Red Sea port of Eilat, once just a "promising": tourist attraction, had become Israel's second tourist hit.

THE GAMBLE on building a string of hotels along the shores of the year-round warm-weather Gulf of Eilat that would attract mainly winter tourism has paid off. Fourteen weekly charter flights that land directly at Eilat in the winter months, as well as other flights that bring the visitors to Eilat via Israel's main gateway, Ben Gurion Airport near Tel Aviv, keep Eilat's facilities fully occupied for at least five months a year.

TOURISTS who come to Eilat to swim and sunbathe have found it a convenient headquarters for week-long hikes into the southern Sinai mountains with their breathtaking rugged beauty, or for scuba diving and fishing escapades at Sharm-el-Sheikh, near the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula. Other spots on the Sinai coast have become unofffical beaches without any publicity.

ISRAEL HAS made an effort to open up the northern part of the country to tourism. Though the Plaza Hotel in Tiberias — managed by the Canadian Pacific chain, which also runs the Jerusalem Plaza — has barely been discovered by visitors since it opened last year, we found it to be one of the most beautifully designed and best managed hotels in Israel.

YET THE investors indicate they have a serious problem: "How can you bring tourists to a five-star hotel located in a three-star town?" one of them asked. But Tiberias, like the rest of Galilee, is rapidly overcoming its "three-star" status.

Red Sea cruise offered

TEL AVIV — An Israeli tour operator and a Cairo tourist office have agreed to run charter cruises between Israel and Egypt through the Red Sea.

The management of Mandy's tours said in an interview that agreement had been reached with the Emco travel agency in Cairo for a regular service between Israel's southern port of Eilat and the Egyptian resort of Hurghada, now being developed by the Egyptian government.

ON THE GO

With Jerry Hulse

Mexicali Rose will do just fine.

And now to introduce the Enchilada Express. Or to put it another way, the no-no airline: no steaks, no stews, no flicks, no booze.

Well, they do carry coffee and doughnuts. (You were expecting tacos, maybe, and a margarita?)

The refreshments you'll have to fetch yourself, the reason being that only one crew member is aboard — the pilot, who else? — and he's too bloody busy flying the machine!

As California's littlest airline, Mexican Air Service makes no pretense of competing with the biggies. It's strictly a get-you-there airline.

No frills. Yes, and no spills. So far it's had a perfect safety record.

MAS SERVES three areas of Mexico: Mulege and Loreto on the Baja California Peninsula and Guaymas on the Gulf of California using twin-engine Cessnas. Come now, you remember those airplanes with propellers, don't you?

MAS flies south four days a week: Sunday, Monday, Thursday and Friday, leaving Santa Monica Municipal Airport at 7:30 a.m. and arriving three hours later at Mulege. Loreto, being just next door, is only a few minutes farther. And in another 40 minutes one can be sunning, fishing or girl-watching in Guaymas.

A WEEKEND package to Mulege (touted as the world's biggest fish trap) comes to $219.50. That's for the whole enchilada: round-trip air fare plus three nights' accommodations at Hotel Serenidad. For an extra $40 you can stretch it out for an entire week.

If one chooses Guaymas instead, there is a four-day, three-night bundle that includes flight, hotel and meals for $249.50. Or you'll pay $330 for a week-long package.

NOW WHY IN the name of Taco Bell would anyone wish to fly with MAS instead of the older, scheduled airlines?

Well, for one thing, MAS insists it's more fun. No long waiting lines at the airport. Flights low enough to ground to see what's going on. Yes, and also there are no snippy stewardesses marching up and down the aisle issuing orders like some leatherneck drill sergeant.

Now before anyone gets huffy and accuses MAS of being an antifeminist outfit, let the record show that a hot-tempered, red-headed, red-blooded female runs this outfit.

IT'S GIL Gunnell's baby and she operates it like a pro. To her, flying is the name of the game. Nothing else, period.

MAS gets few complaints and a lot of praise, as attested to by this letter writer:

I just returned from your Mulege trip and I feel I would be remiss if I did not compliment you on running a first-rate operation. You may not be perfection, but if not, the difference is insignificant. Your pilot (he flies your plane with a magical touch), the treatment at Hotel Serenidad in Mulege — all of this can only be described as 'tops.' Even my wife — who hates Mexico with a passion for reasons best known to her — admitted to me that this trip was 'truly enjoyable.' "

WHILE GIL Gunnell may do her job in an executive fashion, she also loves a party. Had Gil gone to Washington instead of flying school, she'd probably be D.C.'s busiest hostess. As it is, she's known by flyers from San Fernando to Santa Fe as the Pearl Mesta of the airline dodge. Particularly when it comes to Mexico.

Her biggest bash so far was held near Manzanillo, attracting 156 flyers and passengers. Out of the heavens came dozens of planes. So many it looked like a Second World War invasion. There was everything from a single-engine puddle jumper to a sleek, twin-engine Cessna.

AND THAT, roundabout, is how MAS got started.

The plot's so awful Hollywood wouldn't have it. But here it is: pretty redhead meets handsome flyer, flyer flips over redhead and before you can say "Roger ann out" they run away and get married.

WELL, THIS was years ago. Meanwhile, to attract new customers to her husband's flying school, Gil came up with the idea of hosting weekend parties for private flyers. She chose Mexico because it was close enough for a weekend and foreign enough to be fascinating.

Not only did the flyers enjoy themselves, but so did their passengers. So much so that dozens signed up for lessons when they got home.

It's been going this way ever since. Destinations include Cabo San Lucas, Guaymas, Careyes, La Paz. The farthest was Zihuatanejo: 1,580 miles with 30 planes, 120 pilots and passengers.

OCCASIONALLY, all that heady Latin romance gets to someone — the warm evenings, the big Mexican moon and all. Five years ago in Cabo a couple decided to get married on the spot. Gil pulled it off with aplomb. She hired every cab in town — all four — and reserved the bridal suite at the Hotel Finistera.

After the ceremony the taxis took off with the wedding party, papers streaming, dust billowing behind. Dogs chased the cabs. Kids chased the dogs. Mariachis played, margaritas flowed.

IT WAS A beautiful, story-book wedding. Everyone was misty-eyed. But it didn't last. Unfortunately, with the stardust gone out of their eyes, the bride and bridegroom found later they really couldn't stand one another.

So they got a divorce.

Color splashes 'La Belle province'

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

It's blue summer now in Quebec province. "La Belle province" the French Canadians say affectionately. Excellent country to drive through. Highways divided by a band of grass a half a block wide. Canada has plenty of space.

The highways run through forests of green pine and white birch. Through graceful maples that give Canada her flag: Red-white-red with a red maple leaf centered.

You can rent small chalets looking over the broad St. Lawrence and live in villages where only French is spoken.

"Mais non, M'sieu," she said. All the other girls giggled. It was as though I'd asked if they spoke Swahili.

Canadian money is printed in English and French.

All familiar canned goods you'll recognize have labels printed in English and French.

Recipes on the outside are in both languages.

Don't rent chalets by long distance. Don't rent from an agent in Quebec City something three hours east. All houses for rent are "chalets," and I saw some raunchy housing marked "chalet."

THIS IS Canada's biggest province with plenty of room to drive.

Best drive is along the Gaspe Peninsula. (Say it "Gas-PAY".) This is the pouting lower lip that makes the broad mouth of the St. Lawrence. A thousand kilometres of fine highway with not too much traffic.

Five of every six Quebecois live in cities. Mainly Montreal and Quebec.

In the villages (all named for Saints), there's little travelling. I went out one Sunday afternoon in little Baie St. Paul to see what the action was.

There was only one other car on the streets. I managed to hit him. Stopped at a corner and backed up without looking. Why look? He was in back of me. Crash!

ABOUT EVERY 48 kilometres a big brown fleur-de-lys jumps up from the wild forest. Points you to a government camp ground.

They're excellent places, usually beside a river where you can pull in fat trout. Well-kept toilets and showers. Tubs to wash clothing.

It's grand hitchhiking country. A tourist bureau man said: "We estimate 400,000 young Americans backpack through Quebec in the summer."

"WE'VE BEEN told it's much too warm in Jamaica in the summer . . ."

I didn't find it so. I took a house for July and August. (Everything in Jamaica is a "villa".) Spent most of my time in shorts. The temperature ran 30 tops at midday.

Lots of hotels at all prices and lots of tourists. The villa rental is the thing. Jamaica Tourist Board gets a listing for you. You can depend on their description. Which you can't with the "chalets" of Quebec.

Prices for tourists are fairly high in the big, swingy hotels at Mobay and at Ocho Rios — which is all tourists.

Help is low-paid so my villa came with a cook, maid and gardener. A little rainy in July, August, September. But it's tropical rain. Comes down by the bucketful for an hour and then blows off over the green mountains.

THE FARTHER up the coast you go, the higher the prices.

Ocho Rios is the blue water edge of the golden land. A dozen or more luxury hotels. Tropical gardens. River rafting — "Watch out for de crocodiles, sah." (Crocodiles? Lemme offa here!)

You can get posh hotels suited for the rocking chair set. Or tie into iced banana punches at the Playboy Club, served by a chocolate bunny.

Famous market closes

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — After nearly 150 years, Manchester's famous Smithfield Market, named after a similar institution in London, has closed down.

Four years ago, Manchester's wholesale fruit, vegetable and fish trade moved to a new market in Arndale, four kilometres away. But 17 traditional stalls continued selling fresh fish retail. Three stalls were left when Smithfield closed last month and none of their proprietors intend moving to the new market.

Stockholm a haven for spending leisure intelligently

By JENNIFER MERIN

"To be able to fill leisure intelligently is the last product of civilization." - Bertrand Russell, in Conquest of Happiness.

It is easy to imagine that this philosopher — who entertained such intelligent thoughts about leisure — would have highly recommended Stockholm as a haven of opportunity for the intelligent use of free time.

Sweden's high standard of living has produced a society with large amounts of leisure time. The Swedish people, therefore, have developed vast resources of leisure activity — many of which are geared to cultural enrichment.

ONE OF THE Swedes' highest priorities has been to keep the environment in their capital city as hospitable and pleasing as possible. While conscientiously preserving its natural beauty, ancient architecture, and reasonable pace of life, Stockholm has adopted every modern convenience.

The result is one of the most beautiful urban centres in the world. Stockholm covers 14 islands where the outlet of Lake Malmar reaches the Baltic Sea. The islands are laced together and to the mainland by a series of graceful and well-proportioned bridges. Sky and sea are a magnificent blue, so rich, clear, and closely matched in hue that the land masses, with their elegant edifices and bountiful greenery, seem peacefully suspended between the two.

AIR, LAND, and water provide distinctly lovely views of the city. The approach to Arlanda Airport gives you a full, dazzling overview. Pan American's Flight 120 (direct service from San Francisco, with connections from New York via London) arrives in Stockholm at 3:30 p.m., when the sunlight shimmers pure silver on windswept waters and Stockholm's suburban fields of flowers seem a patchwork quilt of color.

SOME PEOPLE would rather see Stockholm from the water. Short boat jaunts along the canals provide closer views of the city's stately mansions — many of which occupy choice waterfront sites — and of Stockholm's bridges. Tours are regularly scheduled by Waxholm Bolaget (leaving from Stromkagen, near the Grand Hotel) and Forsman Sightseeing (from City Hall Bridge). Boats may also be rented privately or chartered.

ANOTHER PLEASANT way to see Stockholm is by foot. This city invites strolling, particularly on summer evenings when sunlight illuminates the hours of 10 and 11. It's especially pleasant in the Old Town, where breezes waft off the water and meander down narrow, cobbled lanes, flanked on both sides by charming houses, carefully preserved from medieval times.

WANDER DOWN unknown alleys and discover ancient state buildings, quaint shops, and extraordinary views. Lilac bushes and other flora grow freely in the most surprising places. They are enough to convince you that Stockholm is a great bouquet.

Another delightful place for a leisurely walk, which deserves a full day, is Skansen, located on Djurgatan. This popular, parklike establishment offers a unique perspective of Scandinavian life. Various buildings from all Scandinavian regions, different historical periods, and social and economic classes have been relocated to this site. They are displayed in spaces sufficiently forested to suggest their original surroundings. Through Skansen, it is possible to simulate visits to rural Sweden without ever leaving Stockholm.

HIGHLIGHTS include several functioning farms, vintage 16th, 17th and 18th centuries, and the remarkable 18th-century Seglora Church, where wedding bells still chime on weekends.

There is a complete town of old-fashioned shops, where glass is blown, pottery is thrown, and papers are printed. These products are sold and make wonderful souvenirs and gifts. Skansen's zoo, with its full complement of native Scandinavian wildlife and some impressive imports (including two elephants with quite distinctive personalities, for example,) is impressive, entertaining, and educational.

TEA SHOPS, in the elegant good taste of reserved antiquity, offer fresh and delicious refreshments. Outdoor concerts are held in the evenings. Skansen undoubtedly is ideal for children. Access to the park by ferryboat (from Slussen or Nybroplan; buses are also available) adds appeal to this excursion.

En route from the ferryboat to Skansen you pass an unusual edifice, built to house the briny hull of the salvaged 17th-century warship Wasa, which sank on her maiden voyage in 1628. The exact location of the ship was discovered in 1956, but it was 1961 before engineering ingenuity successfully raised her from the deep and hauled her to dry dock at the present site.

THE WASA, a fascinating item for investigation, is set off by informative displays of her construction contracts and plans and a detailed accounting of technology employed to raise and restore her.

Skansen and the Wasa dockyard are two of Stockholm's 52 museums. The Royal Coin Cabinet contains 400,000 coins, 40,000 bank notes, and 35,000 medals, with some items dating back to the 16th century. The National Museum displays six Rembrandts, including the famous Oath of the Batavians, and a comprehensive collection of Scandinavian artists. The newly established Kulturehuset devotes six floors to exhibitions of art, inventions, toys, and topics of historical interest. Even the subway stations are decorated with challenging conceptual designs and educational displays.

THE GENEROUS and friendly personnel of Swedish Tourist Board, in Hamngatan, will gladly provide current schedules of exhibitions and listings of the many drama and opera performances and concerts that are a regular part of the cultural life of Stockholm. Information on hotels, restaurants and public transportation is also readily available.

You may feel that this much leisure time activity is exhausting you. This is the time to turn to the beach. Beautiful, secluded country spots for swimming, sunbathing, and fishing are within 10 minutes' travel time from the centre of Stockholm.

Courtyard of Stockholm's beautiful Town Hall

Youth helped

NEW YORK — Last month the unlimited mileage Eurail Youthpass for young people under 26 years of age became open-dated, putting it on the same basis as the Eurailpass.

Heretofore, the Eurail Youthpass was predated at the time of purchase for its first date of use. The effect of the decision made at a recent meeting in Oslo of the Eurail Plenary Conference is to liberalize and make more flexible the Eurail Youthpass.

GREAT MINDS AT THE BOARD

— J. W. von Goethe

"In chess, as played by a good player, logic and imagination must go hand in hand, complementing each other."
— J. R. Capablanca

"Sacrifices only prove that someone has blundered."
— Dr. S. Tartakower

THE TUCSON OPEN

In May, I directed the first Tucson Open. It was good and hot outside — but no hotter than some of the battles that raged over the chess boards in the cool playing hall. There were 185 players, participating in two sections. Grandmaster James Tarjan placed first with five out of five points. Eight players tied for second. Here is the game that won the brilliancy prize.

'Lady Gumshoes' Not Their Label

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two San Francisco women have been surviving since 1974 in that hoariest of macho strongholds — the world of the private eye.

Now experienced at skip-tracing witnesses and compiling dossiers, detectives Cathy Kornblith and Marion Pardo are still considered curiosities in a field where the mold was cast long ago in cheap whiskey and shoulder holsters.

"The stereotyping is unbelievable," Kornblith, 31, said. "We don't wear white gloves and we don't sneak up on people. We don't have any kind of secret, manipulative powers either."

Their unusual choice of a profession has earned the two women every label from "lady gumshoes" and "female Fosdicks" to latter-day Mata Haris. One magazine article about them was headlined: "Women who snoop for a living."

"There's an image of us as kind of super-duper women investigators," Kornblith said. "There aren't a lot of other women (detectives), and so we do get talked about more than your typical investigator."

Also setting them apart, the two are political leftists in a profession populated mostly by ex-cops.

Their clients have included defendants in the "San Quentin Six" trial, an accused Chinatown bank robber, a lesbian trying to keep custody of her child and Bill and Emily Harris of the defunct Symbionese Liberation Army.

But they also have rejected many potential clients — including domestic and child custody cases — and those involving insurance or credit investigations. They call their agency "The People's Eye" and they favor the underdog.

In a Macy's vs. Consumers suit, for instance, "we wouldn't take Macy's case against them, but we would take them against Macy's," Pardo, 28, said.

"Society tracks poor people in the direction of using — quote — illegal means to get what they want," Kornblith said. "The fact that so many poor people are accused of, or actually commit, crimes has to do with society."

Their outlook stems from the years when both women worked in the anti-Vietnam war movement, and later, to reform California prisons.

"I was in the anti-war movement, and friends of mine were put into prison for their resistance to the war. That's what got me interested in prisons," Kornblith said.

Indeed, the People's Eye is most in demand by radical lawyers with prisoner clients. Their involvement with the trials of the San Quentin Six and American Indian Movement leaders Paul Mohawk and Richard Skyhorse has given Kornblith and Pardo a reputation as experts on prison riots and left-wing "underworld" murders.

Although they are reluctant to discuss precisely how they work, the women do say detecting is not at all it's cracked up to be on television.

"It's not the way it is on TV and in the movies for us," Pardo said. "In a lot of ways we are different because we have a political perspective. We aren't ex-cops and we don't have those kinds of contracts."

"That kind of detective is generally trying to put someone away," Kornblith added, "and we're generally trying to free them or get them out of jail."

Death Sentence

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Chesterfield Johnson has been given the mandatory death sentence for the rape and murder of an 11-year-old girl. His lawyer, who asked the jury for a verdict of manslaughter, said she will appeal the conviction. Three days and nights of rioting followed the hangings last December of two men convicted of murders.

Last Matches For Scotland?

GLASGOW, Scotland (Reuter) — Don Masson and Lou Macari, both members of the trouble-torn Scottish soccer squad during the World Cup finals in Argentina last month, seem certain to have played their last match for Scotland.

A Scottish Football Association inquiry has reccomended that Masson, a Derby County midfield player, should be "accommodated in his desire" not to play for Scotland again.

Masson said he took drugs before Scotland's 3-1 opening World Cup defeat by Peru, and said he no longer wanted to play for Scotland.

Willie Johnston, a West Bromwich Albion winger, admitted taking stimulants following a positive dope test after the Peru match. He was banned from international soccer for one year by the International Football Association and sent home in disgrace.

The SFA committee warned manager Aly MacLeod about the advisability of selecting Macari in the future. MacLeod, heavily criticized after Scotland's poor displays, survived a motion to axe him following a five-hour meeting last Friday.

DALLA RIVA HURT

MONTREAL (CP) — X-rays have confirmed that tight end Peter Dalla Riva of Montreal Alouettes suffered two broken metacarpal bones in his left hand in a 17-10 loss to Ottawa Rough Riders in season-opening Canadian Football League action Tuesday night. He will be out of action for about two weeks.

Halt That Wood Rot With Special Epoxy

Copyright © 1978 POPULAR SCIENCE

By A. J. HAND

Wood is a wonderful material, but it does have certain shortcomings. One of these is its vulnerability to rot, a natural process of decay that can turn even the hardest oak into a crumbling powdery mass.

But if you detect the rot before it goes too far you can halt the process. And at the same time you can restore to the wood much of its original strength.

The secret is a special penetrating epoxy formula sold under various trade names. These epoxies penetrate into the wood to seal it against the moisture that is causing the rot. And they bind the fibres of the weakened wood back together.

Rot restorers aren't cheap. They often cost over $10 a pint. But when a certain part of your home — usually an outside windowsill or threshold, or maybe a wooden gutter — is hit by rot, restorers are often the cheapest, easiest solution to your problem.

Where can you buy rot restorer? The product is really intended for use on boats so it's usually available at marine centres.

How do you use it? Simple. First of all, make sure the wood you want to treat is dry and free of any paint or varnish that could interfere with penetration of the epoxy. Only work when the temperature is between 50 and 75 degrees. The epoxy won't cure well at low temperatures, and may cure so fast it won't have time to soak in at higher temperatures.

Check the depth of the rot by probing with an icepick. If it is more than a half-inch deep, drill a series of small holes into the area to be treated. These holes will serve as conduits that conduct the epoxy deep into the rotted wood.

Now you are ready to start the treatment. Mix up the two-part epoxy according to label directions. Start at one end of the rot. Apply the epoxy by brush or by pouring, working continuously to the other end of the rot. Do not work in a random pattern or you may trap air inside the rot. This will interfere with penetration of the epoxy.

Spread the rot restorer with a paint brush, taking care to fill any holes you drilled. Don't brush the stuff out as you would paint. Keep the wood good and wet. Be sure to apply the restorer to every accessible surface of the rotted wood. End grain will soak up epoxy faster than other parts of the wood, so flood end grain heavily.

Let the epoxy cure for a full 24 hours. Then you can begin final finishing, if desired, treating the restored wood just as you would new wood. Sand it smooth. Fill any cracks or holes, including those you drilled to encourage penetration. Use an automotive body filler, or a product such as epoxy steel putty.

Sand the putty smooth and paint if you like. Porch and deck paint will hold up well on a threshold.

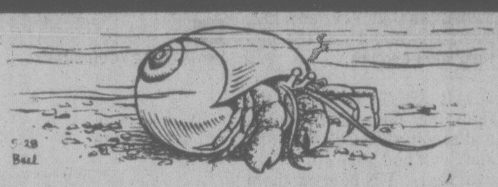
CRUNCHER THE CRAB CAN TOP 20 YEARS

Wonderful World of Animals



DEAR DR. MILLER: This boy I know has a big pet hermit crab. He claims Cruncher, that's the crab, is older than I am. My father says that's a lot of baloney, that hermit crabs haven't been around that long. You can see I need some help in getting this straightened out. — S.R.

DEAR S.R.: While the hermit crab craze is new, hermit crab types have been going about their own business for many millions of years. Age? Unless you are several decades old yourself, it just could be that crab is your elder (sort of), since healthy hermits may remain crabbily alive for 20 years or more.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I read an authoritative article which stated flatly that spaying a dog won't make her fat, yet you say that it will. I'd like to know the real scoop on this because I'm considering right now whether or not to have my dog spayed. — T.R.

DEAR T.R.: Spaying won't make your dog fat but the food she eats after she is spayed may. This is not, however, a reason for not spaying your dog; it is simply a reason for controlling your dog's weight after she is spayed. The difference is that slightly less food would be required for weight gain when she has had her ovaries removed — but she won't gain weight unless she gets those excess calories. In other words, there are many fat spayed females and there are many fat unspayed females. With very rare exceptions they have, in either group, been overfed.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chips, my canary, lost his right leg in a plane accident six months ago. My son's toy plane fell on him. The doctor said he would get by nicely on one leg and he has. The trouble is, my sister keeps telling us it is cruel to keep him alive. I don't think so because he is cheerful and active. Would he be secretly suffering in some manner that I can't detect? I wouldn't want him to, of course, but I sure want to keep him otherwise. — T.P.

DEAR T.P.: Have Chipper's doctor re-examine him for a final determination. While it's true a bird may be in pain without any obvious symptom of it, it's also true that just because Chips is an amputee doesn't mean he is suffering. While he can never put his right foot forward, odds are excellent Chips is perfectly happy hopping about with what he has left . . .

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Have your wedding bouquet preserved! . . .

For the last couple of weeks we've had the loveliest little flower arrangement gracing our dining table . . . roses and baby's breath picked in a friend's garden . . . Like all such floral offerings . . . a joy to receive and a sadness to see fade after a few days . . . But not these of ours! They've been preserved to last practically forever by a clever lady we recently met . . . and look as fresh and lovely as the day we got them! . . . The lady in question is Mrs. Ingrid Nielsen . . . who for the past four years has been making a business out of what started as a hobby . . . In her own home she preserves bridal bouquets, corsages, orchids or anthurium from Hawaii, flowers from your own or a friend's garden or flowers you were given to mark a memorable occasion . . . Any sort of flowers, in fact, that you'd like to keep for sentimental reasons! . . . The other day she'd just completed an arrangement made from a wedding bouquet . . . Some brides like their bouquet preserved exactly "as is" . . . but others, like this one, were taken apart and re-arranged in a pretty basket . . . Really, when you see these preserved flowers, we'd defy you to detect they were not fresh from the florist or garden! . . . And talking of gardens, we know of some people who have their own garden flowers preserved to use in the house all winter . . . A marvellous idea, this! . . . The process takes about one week . . . and prices are extremely reasonable . . . around $12 for a large bouquet . . . smaller ones proportionately less . . . Telephone any time, including evenings and weekends . . . Mrs. Ingrid Nielsen, 1472 Begbie St., 595-0713.

Fall line of Bleyle at Roy Imports . . .

One of the things we've noticed about Bleyle . . . women who have ever worn these quality West German sports clothes . . . and that goes for us, too . . . become hooked on them and just don't feel happy in any other make! . . . Bleyle things . . . as well as being smart and comfortable . . . are just such good value! . . . You can keep on wearing them for years and always enjoy them . . . feel you're well-dressed . . . Roy Imports will probably have their fall shipment of Bleyle by the time you read this . . . or if not, it will be in any day, so here's what you can expect to find: Pure 100% wool in both double knit and flannel . . . this latter being an even nicer quality than last year's! . . . Slacks, of course . . . Jackets in three styles . . . regular blazer . . . a shorter blazer and a shirt jacket . . . (The shorter blazer is wonderful with a skirt and on shorter women!) . . . And classic A-line skirts, in both materials . . . Colors are a beautiful grey, not in the line last year . . . A new dark navy called Marine, camel, brown, a dark rust . . . Aubergine, a new rich plum shade and a beautiful new shade of green . . . not too light and not too dark . . . To top everything off there's a front-buttoned printed wool challis top with border print, in colors to co-ordinate . . . as well as a big selection of regular Hooper shirts in printed polyester . . . Like everything else, prices are up slightly this year . . . but very little compared with others . . . Bleyle is still well worth the price! . . . Roy Imports, 435 Simcoe St., 384-4932 and 9807 Third St., Sidney, 656-3522.

As far as we're concerned, one visit to Gibson's is as good as a lengthy session studying the pages of Vogue . . . because we not only SEE the latest styles, but also learn how they should be worn and combined for the greatest effectiveness! . . . The whole look this year is pulled together . . . you start with either a coat or suit and go on from there . . . Color should be on color . . . i.e. . . . wear a grey blouse with a grey suit . . . no startling contrasts, please! . . . Getting back to the pulled-together look we mentioned . . . Gibson's have a marvellous soft coat in cashmere and wool . . . Double-faced in either banker's grey with light grey inside . . . or pony brown lined with camel . . . It's a wrap coat with a detachable hood . . . Perfect winter coat for our part of the world . . . With the brown coat, you might wear the new soft tweed suit . . . camel with almost a tiny check weave . . . The light weight blazer jacket is not too fitted, and there's a fullish skirt with a tiny waistband . . . in a different, flatter tweed than the jacket . . . A vest is trimmed with this latter tweed . . . Gibson's complete the ensembe with a brown crepe de chine blouse with mandarin neck and soft gathered shoulders and back yoke . . . Wear the skirt, blouse and vest by themselves . . . the latter left unbuttoned . . . instead of a dress . . . With the grey coat, consider the chic banker's grey flannel suit with ultrasude trim on the jacket and fringing the long scarf . . . flat-pleated skirt svelte over the hips . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Needlepoint with a difference . . .

Over 500 people from Victoria and Up-Island have taken classes in a fascinating type of needlecraft known as Canvas Work . . . Given by Corinne Calvert of the Hallmark Gift Shop . . . the only exponent of this type of work in Victoria . . . who herself learned it from some of the best teachers in the world! . . . We were introduced to this canvas work for the first time this week . . . and were speechless with admiration at the beauty and originality of the pieces we saw . . . It's basically needlepoint, but with a difference . . . there are no charts, no painted designs used . . . It simply starts with a piece of plain canvas worked with textured stitches which change the entire surface . . . they shape, shade it and color it . . . getting a 3-dimensional form of texture . . . No two pieces are ever alike and it's a perfect outlet for artistry and creativity! . . . Lorraine Calvert is now taking registrations for September classes, and it's not a minute too early for you to sign up since these classes are already half full . . . Even if you can do needlepoint now, you'll be required to start in a beginners class because the approach is so entirely different . . . it's planned from an art standpoint and not from a ladies' "busy work" angle . . . Students are encouraged to express themselves . . . And believe us, they do! . . . Drop by and have Mrs. Calvert tell you what it's all about . . . we're sure you'll be thrilled with this new approach to needlepoint . . . Hallmark Gift Shop, 2865 Foul Bay Rd., 592-3545.

Ultrasuede made to order for travellers . . .

Friend of ours just back from Europe is ecstatic about how she spent six weeks with just one small suitcase containing mostly the pieces of ultrasuede she wasn't at the moment wearing! . . . Always, she said, she looked and felt band-box fresh . . . and just too smart for words! . . . We agree, ultrasuede is a gift from heaven to a traveller . . . It's light, easily packable, washable . . . (just sponge it off if you get a spot!) . . . All-in-all a well worth-while investment! . . . Which brings us to the smart ultrasuede things we saw at Charmante's last Monday . . . Wrap coats, unlined, in champagne, grey, navy and tisane, a pinky beige . . . Wrap skirts to match . . . Unlined blazers to top pants, skirts and soft dresses . . . Lined blazers in navy and black . . . Skirt suits in tisane, mink, myosotis (a delicate blue-grey) and other colors . . . coat dresses which you can wear either alone as a dress, or with something underneath as a coat . . . One of these has a mandarin collar . . . There are those very versatile jumpers . . . and some other pretty dresses . . . We like the Jerry Silverman dress with faggoting detailing and elasticized waist . . . Charmante's have a very good selection of ultrasuede, so if you'd like something made of this truly marvellous fabric . . . do pay an early visit to . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

The makings of your new fall wardrobe . . .

A stroll through Eaton's Fabric Garden last Monday reveals that new fall fabrics have started to come in . . . and you lucky gals who know your way around a pattern and sewing machine should find plenty to inspire you right now at Eaton's! . . . We noted some very attractive rayon challis in pretty floral prints . . . some also with border prints . . . on dark backgrounds . . . This is 115 cm. wide and costs $8 a metre (in case you haven't yet learned to think metric . . . that's 45" . . . And a metre is 3½" longer than a yard) . . . This light-weight challis would make delightful transition dresses for late summer and early fall . . . Saw some new wool and polyester mixtures with a tweedy look, in muted fall colors . . . 154 cm. at $12 per m. . . . Also wool and nylon flannel at $18 . . . Dark brown, rust, beige, navy, grey and black in this . . . Wool worsted plaids in authentic tartans are $16.95 a metre . . . and there's a new shipment just in of Viyellas in paisleys, tartans, small prints with dark backgrounds, as well as plain colours . . . Those with lighter backgrounds are very nice for dressing gowns and the like . . . These are just the vanguard of fall fabric shipments . . . Much more will be coming in soon . . . While you're browsing, do see the beautiful big sewing boxes from California . . . They're quilted prints with clear plastic covered tops, or plain in a suede-like material . . . Great Christmas gift for a sewer! . . . Eaton's Fabric Garden, 382-7141, loc. 233.

A great cruising experience awaits you! . . .

Of all the various waters one may conceivably cruise in . . . we honestly think traversing the Panama Canal must be one of the most interesting! . . . It's an enthralling experience, in fact, which everyone should enjoy at least once . . . though actually it never palls! . . . Paulin's tell us they still have a limited number of cabins available in the block they acquired aboard the Pacific Princess . . . which sails from San Juan, Puerto Rico, on November 25 . . . and gives you two glorious weeks in the sunny Caribbean and through the exciting Panama Canal, arriving at Los Angeles on Dec. 9 . . . Ports of call include St. Thomas, Caracas, Cuaracao, Panama City, Acapulco and Cabo San Lucas . . . at all of which you may sight-see either on you own or a shore tour . . . We can't quote fares here because they're subject to variables . . . but they do include a charter flight from Los Angeles to San Juan where you start your cruise . . . Ted Woodcock at Paulin's will tell you all about it . . . give you full information . . . and if you're interested and would like to see the ship, give Ted a call and he'll either take you himself or arrange for you to visit the Pacific Princess next time she's in port here . . . He's travelled on the ship himself so is well equipped to answer all your questions . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-9168.

The Overlord Embroidery

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Recently I mentioned the Overlord Embroidery, the modern counterpart of the Bayeux tapestry. The latter is an embroidery panel of linen 231 depicting the invasion of Britain by William the Conqueror in 1066.

The Overlord Embroidery tells the story of the Allied invasion which began in June of 1944, this time to free Europe. Commissioned in 1968 by Lord Dulverton, who served with the Lovat Scouts in the Second World War, it was designed by Sandra Lawrence. Guidance and advice was given by historians from the British army, navy and air force, who served with Operation Overlord.

It was made by the Royal School of Needlework, founded in 1872, and it took 23 persons more than five years to complete. It is now in the Imperial War Museum in London.

The term embroidery may be a misnomer. While the panels do contain quite a bit of embroidery, whole areas of color are supplied by applique. For instance, a group of paratroopers' uniforms are from the original uniform material, along with stirchery providing the shading to give the various attitudes.

The whole effect is fresh, clean and strangely powerful. The blue-green sea, flecked with foam, is almost as real as is the smoke from the blazing tanks. Major personalities are also depicted and are clearly recognizable: Churchill, Rommel, Montgomery and Eisenhower. This major historical document does not gloss over the horrors of war. The scene of the invasion beaches, with the bodies of the fallen rocked by the incoming surf, is very moving.

The Overlord embroidery is purely pictorial, except where a shoulder flash or army sign can be read. The embroidery ends on a lonely note, with a small party of infantry men, one with a shouldered Bren-gun, moving along a straight poplar-lined road in France and on to the long haul into Germany.

This magnificent piece of embroidery was on tour in Canada and the U.S. during 1973, and many may have seen it. I have seen it quite a few times and I am always moved by the quality of the needlework, the vastness of the scene and the embodiment of the whole story it tells. Having lived in England during this period, I can appreciate the truly moving effect of the whole scene.

This week's pattern is a smart pullover for autumn days. If you have more than one to knit for the coming winter, it would be a good idea to begin during the summer evenings.

The body is knit in the ordinary way, while the yoke is knit from side to side. The snug turtle-neck collar will make this a favourite sweater. Instructions given on the one leaflet are for two, four and six years, or chest measurements of 21 to 25 inches.

It is knitted with a double knitting-weight of yarn which is comletely machine washable and machine dryable, making it a very sensible garment for small folk.

To order Leaflet No. 0478, send 75 cents in coin, plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, a long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped, return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All back numbers in my series are available, price 75 cents, catalogue 25 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope or an extra 25 cents.

DEAR ABBY: After waiting for years for the perfect mate, three months ago I met a wonderful English girl and married her.

Shortly after we were wed, she told me that her mother was terminally ill and she had to go back to England. She knows I'm not a wealthy man, but she expects me to keep sending her money while she's with her mother for an indefinite stay. (Her mother is on a pension.)

I have relatives in England who have tried to meet my wife several times in order to help her out any way they can. My wife has refused to meet my relatives, saying that they were rude when they called.

I offered to go to England to help her, but she says I shouldn't spend the money since there is nothing I can do there.

My question: Should I go to England anyway to find out what is going on there? And if I go, should I surprise her? I have a feeling she is hiding something from me.

PUZZLED HUBBY

DEAR PUZZLED: Something smells fishy here. Don't ASK her if you should come; TELL her you're coming. Then go. You'll get the picture soon enough.

DEAR ABBY: Here are the facts. My daughter, Marcie, had to get married at 17. She and Scott had gone steady for two years. We begged them not to get so thick when they were only kids, but they said they were "in love" and we couldn't keep them apart.

The baby is two years old now, and Scott wants a divorce! (Marcie and the baby have moved in with me.) Scott says he doesn't want the responsibility of marriage. He doesn't love Marcie anymore, and all he wants is out.

He refuses to talk to our minister, and he won't see any kind of a counsellor. He has a job and says he's willing to support the baby, but he is not going to spend his life in a marriage that's hopeless.

Marcie is heartbroken. She says she loves Scott, no matter what, and is willing to do anything to save her marriage. What can you suggest?

MARCIE'S MOM

DEAR MOM: It's not possible to "save" a marriage unless both parties want it saved. And assuming you could force Scott to return to Marcie, a young man who feels trapped would make a miserable husband and a worse father.

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- You need some friendly advice. It's time to stop hassling alone and get a second opinion.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Your vibes are reaching people you don't know. Be aware of the possibilities.

As I grow older, I find images from favorite childhood fairytales flitting through my mind at the oddest times. It can take years for a fairytale to become a reality, but if you pay attention, you'll find the old stories coming true in your own life. On your neutral Bio-dex, mixing a little fantasy with real life can help put your feelings into perspective.

Bleeding Causes Can Vary

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I am five years past my change of life. Every once in a while, I begin to bleed and it almost seems that I'm getting my menstrual periods back again. Isn't this unusual? — Mrs. G.S.

Dear Mrs. S.:

Post-menopausal bleeding must be explained by the doctor or gynecologist. There is a tendency to ignore such bleeding and just hope that it will not recur.

There are many parts of the female generative tract that can be responsible for slight or severe bleeding. The blood may not be coming from the uterus itself. There may also be slight blood-staining due to the hormone imbalance that accompanies the change of life.

Examination of the whole tract, with "Pap" smears of the cervix, is absolutely essential to be sure that some important disorder is not overlooked.

Many women who have bleeding after the change of life live in terror that there may be some cancer present. I know one particular person, a normally sensible woman, who was so petrified about a similar condition that she lived in a constant state of terror for two years about the cancer that never existed. This kind of fear can do an enormous injustice to one's sense of tranquility.

Although your condition can be something of relative unimportance, don't do yourself a similar injustice by not tracking down the cause of your bleeding.

Along about this time, just before summer, I start to get severe itching of the eyes. It lasts for a few months and ruins any fun I can have. No one seems to be able to find out what I'm allergic to. Can you recommend anything? — Miss D.W.

Dear Miss W.:

The condition you describe certainly sounds like an allergic conjunctivitis. The possible causes are so vast that sometimes it's almost impossible to find the exact offender.

Unusual sensitivity to animals, animal dander, dust, pollens, fungus spores, plants and grasses are only a bare few of the possible causes for allergic irritation of the conjunctiva, the delicate lining of the eye. You can understand, therefore, why your doctor has had difficulty in tracing the source of your allergy.

Antihistamine drugs, eye ointments, especially those containing cortisone, can relieve the itching of the eyes and the excess tearing that so frequently accompanies this problem.

Sometimes one is fortunate to find the exact offender. When this is discovered, desensitization, similar to that used for hay fever, is effective.

Dear Mrs. N.:

Elastic stockings may give added support and relieve the symptoms of pressure and swelling, sometimes associated with varicose veins.

Peanut Butter, which now forms part of Canada's Food Guide, is a wholesome snack most people enjoy.

The small sandwich-shaped booklet Skippy Sandwich will delight you because it contains recipes for many good things you can make with peanut butter. Most recipes are so simple that even children can follow them.

There is, for instance, a no-cook recipe for finger-licking-good Quick Fudge. Another treat is the Ice Cream Crunch Cake. Its main ingredients, beside peanut butter, are syrup and crisp rice cereal. This, too, does not need cooking or baking.

Another quick and easy recipe which does need baking, however, is for Peanut Butter Old Fashions. This recipe yields six dozen delicious cookies. Other cookies you and your family will like are Peanut Butter Raisin Delights.

Successful Root Cuttings Take a Lot of Care

jack beastall

There are not many gardeners who can resist the urge to root a cutting or two of a favorite plant. Yet, while hundreds of so-called cuttings are taken every year, not many amateurs can point with pride to specimen plants of their own propagation.

To be successful one first needs suitable facilities for handling the young rooted cuttings until large enough to take care of themselves.

The second requirement is shrub material that is in the proper condition to form roots; thirdly, a sufficient number of cuttings to allow for the normal percentage of failures.

Outdoors, a coldframe with six inches of fine sand for a bed into which the pots of cuttings can be set is handy. Also needed is a well-prepared piece of soil in a sheltered place where the rooted cuttings can be planted, transplanted and carefully tended for the one to three years necessary for growing into plants of suitable size to go into beds or borders.

Right here is a good place to stress that a cutting does not develop into a large flowering shrub over winter. If a large shrub is needed immediately it must be purchased from a grower.

The whole idea of rooting cuttings in the home garden is to experience the immeasurable satisfaction of co-operating with nature to produce a living thing of beauty, plus the increased knowledge and better understanding of plant growth and care that is part of the experience.

Indoors, the plastic plant propagator with domed cover replaces the outdoor coldframe; or clay pots may be placed in the bottom of a plastic bread wrapper and the open end closed with a wire tie, allowing several inches of air space above the cuttings.

Three-inch or four-inch clay pots will be needed, except when a plastic propagator is used. Each pot will contain only one kind of cutting. Do not mix the kinds in one pot because of the problems with different rooting periods.

Many cuttings are lost after rooting through being left in the sand too long without any nutrients. As soon as roots are two inches long, the cuttings must go into soil.

For the amateur it is best to put an inch of screened compost in the bottom of each pot over the broken drainage crock, then fill the pot with coarse cutting sand, not fine builders' sand which packs too closely when dampened to allow air to penetrate.

Moisten the contents well and stand aside to thoroughly drain. The same layers of soil and sand are used in the plastic propagators, dampened and drained.

The longest cuttings ever taken are the nine-inch cuttings of black currants and the eight-inch of laurel for hedge plants. These are taken in late September into october, set outdoors in a slit-trench filed with coarse sand and left to make roots the following spring.

Shrub cuttings are taken six inches long and reduced to four inches when trimmed; conifer and heather cuttings are tip growths one to three inches in length according to the type of foliage.

Past weather, as well as the conditions under which the plants have been grown (excess or deficiency of water, too much fertilizer) have a pronouriced effect on the rooting potential of cuttings.

There can be no set calendar date for the collecting of cutting material. Broadly speaking, late July through August into early September is the period in which to test the growth for maturity. This year, due to warm temperatures and lack of rainfall, some plants are nearly ready now.

Suitable material for cuttings from various parts of the same plant will vary in the degree of "ripeness," those from parts in full sun being ready earlier than those in partial or full shade.

If cuttings on the sunny side are over-mature, those in areas with less sun may be in the right condition.

A simple test for the state of maturity is to put the first and second finger each side of a growth made this season, about six inches below the tip, and bend the stem over the first finger with the thumb to form a shape like a hairpin or wire staple.

One of three things can happen; if the portion which is bent flattens or fails to break, the shoot is immature; if it snaps off the wood is too hard. The condition considered ideal is when the stem breaks on the upper, or tension, side but remains attached on the lower side.

The older instructions that certain cuttings must be trimmed above the node, or half-way between nodes, has been disproved.

The next step is to remove the leaves from the lower half of the cutting to have a bare stem for insertion into the rooting medium. This is where the amateur can ruin a good cutting by tearing off strips of the outer skin or ruining the nodal bud from which roots emerge.

The safest way is to hold the cutting in the left hand, pressing the thumbnail against the base of the leaf petiole. A sharp pull outwards and downwards will sever the petiole, leaving a minute portion of its base attached to the stem.

Your garden reference book may mention plants from which a heel cutting must be taken. A heel cutting is a current-year growth, detached with a piece of the old stem attached to the rooting end. Such a cutting is obtained by pulling the growth downwards so that a shield-shaped piece of the parent branch remains attached. The strip of bark at the bottom of the shield is cut off.

One other type of cutting, called a piping, is taken from all dianthus plants, the pinks and carnations. This is obtained by pulling out the top three inches of a side shoot that has borne flowers. The stem releases from a joint and needs no further trimming.

Pipings can be taken at any time from July to early September without need for the bending test applied to shrub cuttings.

Rooting hormones must be used with caution. The powder contains one-half of one per cent acid and 99½ per cent talcum powder which is water resistant. If too much powder is left on the cuttings it prevents water from reaching the cutting to keep it alive until roots form. The comfrey gel described in a recent column is worth trying.

Holes are made in the damp sand around the edge of the pots with a blunt-ended piece of round wood, or dowell. A tapered pointed dowel makes a hole that does not allow the base of the cutting to sit firmly on the sand. After inserting, the sand is pressed firmly around the stem of the cutting.

Some cuttings will root within a few weeks, others will eventually drop their leaves and remain dormant until spring, at which time roots will develop.

After potting into individual pots, the cuttings are grown on over winter in a coldframe or indoors, moving to large pots if necessary until the plants are large enought to go into the prepared bed and withstand outdoor conditions.

Work for Week

This month, order colchicums, daffs and all narcissi, also crocuses for fall and winter bloom. Crocuses and colchicums must be planted before end of August for best results.

Sow seed of mignonette, white alyssum, Evening-scented Stock where they are wanted to flower in late summer and during fall.

Plant out leek seedlings sown last month.

See that all deep-rooting vegetables have occasional soakings with a canvas or plastic soaker operating at low water pressure so that all the water soaks into the soil near the plants.

Comfrey can be kept producing the new tender shoots for cooking if occasional deep soaking is practised. The larger leaves are cut up to go into compost heap, or to make liquid fertilizer.

Set out collard greens, a late sowing of kale and brussels sprouts; sow winter radish, endive, New York lettuce and cos lettuce.

Scarlet Runner and other climbing beans need mulching with very old manure or rotted compost to prevent frequent drying out of root area. Runner Beans do not set pods while weather is hot.

Law Broken By Artifacts?

CALGARY (CP) — The seizure of artifacts decorated with eagle feathers from a downtown store challenges Canadians' ability to protect their cultural heritage, according to store manager Jean-Claude Guenat.

An Alberta fish and wildlife officer seized six eagle feather items valued at more than $4,000 this week from the store, First Man Gallery.

A $2,800 Sioux-headdress, a $1,000 peace pipe and four Blood Indian war clubs were confiscated under Section 16 of the Wildlife Act which prohibits possession of birds of prey or their parts.

Guenat said the headdress and peace pipe, dating back from 1880 and 1890 respectively, were obtained in European auctions.

Formal charges have not been laid but are likely as soon as authorities obtain a positive identification of all feathers, said Terry Sturgeon, co-ordinator of provincial court prosecutions.

He said some of the feathers may come from owls and hawks, but this is unlikely to affect the case as all birds of prey are protected under the law.

Ernie Psilka, director of field services and enforcement for the wildlife branch, said even if the headdress and peace pipe were obtained in Europe, international agreements, to which Canada is a signatory, prohibit the export or import of endangered species or their parts.

LAUNDRY FUN? Maybe not, but at least it should be easier with an efficient centre like this. It adjoins kitchen and dining area, close to the heart of family activities, and provides a complete grouping of equipment and storage. All surfaces are washable for easy care. Sorting baskets hold soiled clothes and pull out on sliding shelves. Open shelves hold sewing accesories, steam iron and plastic storage boxes. Laundry aids can be placed in cabinets above dryer and washer, out of children's reach. To order Laundry Centre pattern No. 30118, send $2.50 cheque or money order, plus 50 cents for postage and handling, to Deco-Plans, Victoria Times, P.O. Box 90, Boucherville, Que.

'Miracle Baby' Creates Uproar

LONDON (CP) — The developing rumpus over exploitation of Britain's "miracle baby" is taking on aspects reminiscent of the turbulent birth of the Dionne quintuplets.

Sometime this month, in Manchester hospital, Mrs. Lesley Brown, 32, housewife from Bristol, is scheduled to be delivered by caesarian section, of a baby conceived outside her own body.

British newspapers have dubbed the child, which began its development in a laboratory test-tube, "the miracle baby."

One newspaper group already has bid successfully for the exclusive story. The price has been reported as high as £365,000 ($735,000.) The bidding touched off shocked letters to editors and at least one official inquiry.

In 1934, in the little town of Callander, a crossroads near North Bay, Ont., five daughters were born prematurely — and simultaneously — to Oliva and Elzire Dionne.

Their birth touched off a carnival. It was the only quntuplet birth up to that time in which the babies all lived beyond the first few days.

They were inundated with offers to endorse baby products and at least one Hollywood movie was made with the girls in a starring role.

The quintuplets, to shield them from the uproar, were made wards of the Ontario government until they were 10 years old.

In the case of the unborn baby, Britain's health service has stepped in to investigate the selling of the story, to the Associated Newspapers, publishers of The Daily Mail.

"This is a matter of public interest and importance and the National Health Service facilities were involved," an NHS spokesman said.

"It is not department policy to favor one newspaper. All press and media are entitled to whatever facilities for information are available."

Two newspaper guards stationed outside Mrs. Brown's hospital door were ordered away.

The two doctors leading the medical team — Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards — have issued a statement saying they have not signed any contracts concerning the baby.

They said, however, they had advised the parents to consider newspaper offers both to gain financial security and as a means of controlling intrusion by news organizations.

Mrs. Brown and her husband, John — who has a daughter by a previous marriage — agreed to the test-tube experiment after trying for years to conceive in the normal fashion.

These Workers Bring Their Garden Hoes

WINNIPEG (CP) — Brown-bag lunches and garden hoes. An unlikely combination?

Not for some of the employees at the local Boeing of Canada plant who at this time of year may set off for work carrying both.

For when they're not producing reinforced plastic, they like to squeeze in a little time working on one of the garden plots the company has set aside on six acres of land at the plant.

And for anyone not interested in gardening as a lunch-break activity there are alternatives.

The Boeing grounds also boast a baseball diamond, picnic tables, a small orchard of crabapples that can be picked for jelly and a two-mile jogging track which in winter converts into a cross-country ski trail.

But one of the most successful outside activities has proved to be gardening'

The number of plots has increased steadily since the company set aside the land in an effort to make employees happier and more productive.

"We try to treat people as individuals," said Boeing general manager Loren Dyke. "We're trying to make the work environment more pleasant."

And it seems to be working as some of the more than 500 employees at the plant, opened five years ago, find that recreation can be fitted in before work, during lunch and after work.

The company not only provides the land for the garden plots but tills it twice a year, stakes out the plots and provides water.

All the gardener needs to do is buy the seeds, weed and harvest his crop.

The cross-country skiers aren't forgotten either. Last year, free lessons were offered.

Get in on our Summer-long Commonwealth Extravaganza!

COMMONWEALTH GAMES
August 3 to 12
Ten days of breath-taking competition among athletes from 50 Commonwealth nations around the world will culminate with two exciting events taking place in the streets of Edmonton and the city's beautiful river valley!

The Marathon Run — Aug. 11
This 42 kilometer (26.4 mile) event will feature runners from around the Commonwealth. And you can watch it all on the streets of Edmonton.

The Cycle Road Race — Aug. 12
A 7.8 mile course through Edmonton's beautiful river valley is the setting for this exciting 188 kilometer (117 mile) event.

Pre-Games Canadian Track & Field Trials — July 15 & 16
Witness the spectacle of athletes performing in the final pre-games competition, in the brand new 45,000 seat commonwealth stadium!

Klondike Days — July 19 to 29

The Commonwealth Heritage Festival — July 15 to Aug. 12
A colourful mid-summer happening featuring the rich, diverse cultures of more than 40 Commonwealth nations. Fascinating international food and craft displays. Thrilling entertainment provided by more than 40 local performing groups. Displays of art. Crafts to buy. Films. Concerts. And exotic music from Commonwealth countries around the world.

The 14-day Folk Extravaganza July 31 to Aug. 12
More than 400 dancers, singers and entertainers from Atlantic to Pacific will descend on Edmonton for this unique event. You won't want to miss any of the dazzling performances.

And there's more!
There's the chance to go on safari at the Alberta Game Farm. To step back into history at Fort Edmonton. To wander through glass pyramids at the Muttart Conservatory and see foliage from around the world. To take a trip into the past at the Provincial Museum and Archives. To bet on the horse racing fun at Northlands Park.

For complete information about these and the many other things to see and do this summer in Edmonton, stop in at one of our Visitors Bureaus when you arrive.

Whether you come for a day, a week, a month, you'll find there's even more to see and do. This summer in Edmonton.

South Africans ask investment

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The South African Council of Churches has called on foreign countries and companies to revise investment policies regarding South Africa. The council made its plea despite a South African law which might interpret the action as an offence.

Tsartlip eloquence impresses churchmen

David Elliott and Gabriel Bartleman, elders from the Tsartlip Reserve near Brentwood Bay, were honored guests of the Hudson Kimball Memorial Fund and the Project North Inter-church Committee at a meeting recently in the Salt Spring Community Centre, Ganges.

The two men spoke to the group about their experiences as native people growing up on the Saanich peninsula and brought to light many of the difficulties of being a native since the coming of the white man.

Both men were articulate and precise about their history and concerns. They spoke of the days when their people fished and hunted freely throughout the local area and the Juan de Fuca Islands now closed to them. They spoke of a society with wealth beyond imagination, the abundance of nature with its storehouse of food and of a healthy, happy people. This was a society that had no word for greed.

Elliott told the story of the area that history books leave out; about how their ancestors were led to believe they were signing a peace treaty, that the "X" they signed was the sign of the cross, the peace sign.

The men spoke of the oppression placed upon their people by restrictions and laws which, either naively or by calculation, nearly starved them to extinction or destroyed their culture and spirit as a people. Traditional fishing and hunting grounds and methods were banned, while large white industries were allowed unlimited exploitation of the natural abundance. Their dances and potlatches were forbidden. Sickness never known before wiped out whole families. Elliott repeatedly remarked "I don't know how we ever survived."

Bartleman spoke about local and province-wide concerns of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, such as the Alcan and Loop pipelines passing through native land without much consideration for native people or the environment. He mentioned many other concerns, including education, women's rights and native government.

The audience appreciated the speeches of the two guests and realized it had much to learn from native people to help make this a better country for all. Their hopes and concerns were shared and supported by Project North.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

We like to think that we live in the era of the common man, that all persons are worthy of equal respect—and, deserving of equal disrespect. But we also live in a time of excessive adulation of certain types of persons—of Personalities and Celebrities and Big Shots and Very Important Persons.

This adulation is accorded persons of authentic distinction, persons whose skills and leadership and achievements affect for good the lives of the rest of us. But some recipients of this adulation are of questionable quality. We pay homage to stars of entertainment and sport, not all of whom are cast in heroic moulds. We sometimes let ourselves be excessively impressed by well-known people who seem to be well-known mainly for being well-known. And there are those Big Shots among us whose big-shottery is, by the skills of publicity experts, magnified all out of proportion.

Our adulations, quite silly though many of them are, tend to engender in us feelings of inadequacy and even of failure. Very few of us can play starring roles in life. Eminence and greatness—as we generally judge such things—evade all but a handful of us. And many of us think that life's selection processes are often capricious and sometimes cruel.

Young people on the threshholds of their careers may find this line of thought dreadfully pessimistic—especially those who have quite precise awareness of their own tremendous potentials. I would not tramp wantonly on anyone's aspirations and ambitions: the young person beginning independent life without a substantial basket of them is a pretty sad spectacle. Some of them, of course, will, as they say, "make it big"—but most will not.

I can report that in late middle age it can be painful to accept the fact that many of one's aspirations are not going to be realized. And I am told that one of the grounds of serenity in old age is acceptance of one's failure to realize all that one had fondly hoped for in earlier years.

When Bernard Shaw was a drama critic he was impressed by an actor playing a minor role in one act of a play. In his review Shaw described this actor as "a great artist in small things." That is a wonderful piece of commentary. The best that most of us can hope for is that we may be great artists in small things—and that can be a very good best.

Let us rejoice in the achievements of those who "make it big" in the things that make life better in this way and that for all of us. But let no one think that he or she has failed in life because all dreams have not come true. In the final judgment, the only real failure is not to have striven with all that one is and all that one has in facing life's challenges and opportunities.

Personal greatness is not limited to those who do the big things and get the applause and adulation of the many. Greatness is also a quality of those who do the unexciting things, the routine things, the small things, which contribute to the good life for all.

Baha'is celebrate martyrdom of the Bab

The Baha'i Community of Vancouver Island celebrated one of the most remarkable events in modern religious history last Sunday — the martyrdom of the Bab.

The Bab (The Gate) founded the Babi Faith in Iran in 1844 and was the forerunner and herald of Baha'u'llah (The Glory of God), who founded the Baha'i Faith in 1863.

Baha'is believe that the coming of the Bab and Baha'u'llah fulfilled prophecies in the old and New Testaments and the Koran concerning the establishment of God's kingdom on earth.

The Bab was shot in 1850 at the age of 31, in Tabriz, Iran, six years after his ministry began. His execution was ordered by Persian civil and ecclesiastic leaders who feared the fast-growing religion which spread rapidly across Iran during the 1840s.

The Babi Faith had a history of persecution from its earliest beginnings. Despite its teachings of the unity of religions and of mankind, and of social justice for all regardless of faith, class, race or sex, 20,000 followers were martyred in the first two decades of the faith's existence. Others were imprisoned and banished.

The Bab, who in his writings had earlier predicted his own death, was ordered to be shot in the public square of Tabriz on July 9, 1850. He was discussing some matters with his secretary when guards came to take him for the execution.

In his prison cell he is said to have remarked: "Not until I have said to him all those things that I wish to say can any earthly power silence me. Though all the world be armed against me, yet shall it be powerless to deter me from fulfilling, to the last word, my intention."

The commanding officer of the troops, a Christian, told the Bab he did not wish to be responsible for his death, and the Bab told him if his desire was sincere he would be absolved of responsibility.

The Bab and one of his young followers, who begged to be allowed to die with him, were suspended by ropes from a pillar. Ten thousand spectators were eyewitnesses to what followed when the order to fire was given.

When the smoke from the 750 rifles cleared, the young follower was lying on the ground unhurt and the Bab was not in sight.

Guards found him back in his cell, finishing his interrupted conversation. Many were convinced that a miracle had occurred. The commander of the regiment refused to fire again, and a Muslim regiment had to be brought in.

This time the bodies of the Bab and his companion were riddled with bullets and then thrown in a moat outside the city.

Their remains were later rescued and kept hidden for many years by those who followed his teachings. They now rest at the world centre of the Baha'i Faith in Haifa, Israel, in the magnificent, golden domed Shrine of the Bab which was designed by Canadian architect W. S. Maxwell, who in 1903 became one of Canada's earliest Baha'is.

News of the Bab's execution and the persecution of his followers spread across European literary, artistic, diplomatic and intellectual circles.

The French writer Jules Bois wrote, "All Europe was stirred to pity and indignation . . . Among the litterateurs of my generation in the Paris of 1890, the martyrdom of the Bab was still as fresh a topic as had been the first news of his death. We wrote poems about him. Sarah Bernhardt entreated Catulle Mendes for a play on the theme of this historic tragedy."

Tolstoy wrote in 1903, "I sympathize with Babism with all my heart inasmuch as it teaches people brotherhood and equality and sacrifice of material life for service to God."

In 1908, he wrote, "The teachings of the Bab, which come to us out of Islam, have through Baha'u'llah's teachings been gradually developed and now present us with the highest and purest form of religious teaching."

Baha'is in more than 300 countries around the world now celebrate the martyrdom of the Bab and eleven other holy days each year.

Lenaghan at St. Joseph's organ

Organist death loss to Victoria

The great organ high over the sanctuary of St. Joseph's Church on West Burnside has piped its last voice for the brilliant Victoria organist who helped design it.

John Fay (Jack) Lenaghan died this week at the age of 66, less than five months since the organ was dedicated in a musical program on Feb. 22.

His passing leaves the city's musical scene the poorer for Lenaghan had enriched his world with a number of compositions of his own, including two Masses, several anthems and motets, one of which, Clap Your Hands, has been sung in concert and recorded by the Victoria Choral Society. With extensive background in radio broadcasting, he had been heard in recital both in Canada and the United States. His Magnificat, scored for mixed voices, has been a challenging vehicle for singers in the Victoria area.

Lenaghan came to Victoria from Montreal in 1957, bringing with him an interest in the organ that started as a child. At age 17 he began serious study which eventually included study of harmony and composition and won him a diploma in organ from McGill University.

After serving as a flying instructor with the RCAF in the Second World War, he continued his studies in organ and gained his Licentiate in Music from Trinity College of Music in London, England.

Lenaghan moved to St. Joseph's in 1973 after five years at St. Andrew's Cathedral. He had become well-known to Victorians during his five years on CJVI's Rolling Home Show.

Church Chronicles

Nazarenes leading outdoor services

The outdoor Christian Gospel Service at the Cameron bandshell in Beacon Hill Park will commence at 7 p.m. Sunday and will be the sixth in the series of 12 for the summer season. It will be a joint effort by the Victoria First Church of the Nazarene under Rev. Roland H. Feltmate and the Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene under Rev. Melvin Tucker.

Pastor Feltmate will deliver the gospel message, and Pastor Tucker will be master of ceremonies. There will be several persons giving testimony to their Chirstian faith.

The musical program will feature a Young Adults' Vocal Ensemble and a Teenagers' Vocal Ensemble, and a vocal duet by Roland Renton and Lynn Straiton. Also, there will be instrumental items including a trumpet solo by Tim Tucker.

These popular gospel services for the whole community are in their 36th year and sponsored by Park Services Interdenominational.

●

The Music in the Cathedral program at Christ Church Cathedral, Quadra and Burdette, continues today at 4 p.m. Today's program will be by organist Heather Crook of Queen Margaret's School, Duncan.

This weekend will mark the second of Prairie Sundays at St. John's United Church when visitors have the opportunity to meet friends and members of various prairie communities. Parish coffee hour in the garden court beside the church at 10:30 a.m. is the time for informal welcome. Services are at 9:30 and 11 a.m. Preacher Sunday will be Rev. Robert D. MacRae, rector of St. John's and formerly of Prince Albert and Saskatoon.

Organist David Palmer will be presented in recital at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra St., on Wednesday, at 8 p.m. A native of Victoria, Palmer has established a reputation as a fine recitalist, winning various competitions and performing widely on this continent and in Europe. He is currently on the music staff of the University of Windsor, Ontario. Composers represented in this recital will include Bach, Durufle, Alain. Admission is by program $2 (oap $1).

Medals awarded

Three parishioners of St. Andrew's Cathedral were awarded Diocesan medals by Bishop Remi DeRoo during his parish visit on July 6.

Edward Duncan, an active member of St. Andrew's for the past 37 years, served on the finance committee of the Parish council and has been involved in the St. Vincent de Paul and Holy Name Societies. He was honored for "the total gift of himself wherever help was needed."

Joseph Longpre has been responsible for the newspaper stand for 39 years, as well as being chairman of the 50/50 Club. He has introduced many newcomers and helped many parishioners know each other better. He was honored for his "devoted service to the cathedral."

Joseph Prokopowich, "a model of co-operation and fidelity," has been a parishioner for 50 years and served as sacristan for 11 years, during which time his constant presence in the cathedral and sacristy were "a sign of his deep faith as well as a reassurance to priests and parishioners alike."

Outreach helping fight crime

First United Church, Quadra at Balmoral, is campaigning through its outreach for volunteers to help in the fight against crime.

The church is working with the B.C. Corrections Branch Volunteer Program to recruit volunteers to fill jobs working with offenders on probation and in local institutions.

No special skills are required, only the willingness to try to help someone in difficulty. Persons volunteering should be 19 years of age or older. Main requirement is a mature ability to relate to others.

A couple of hours a week are required. Training and support are provided.

More information is available to any who wish to attend a brief presentation and discussion by probation officer Russell Flower in the social suite of the church, 932 Balmoral, at 7 p.m. on Wednesday.

Quiet August for Trudeau To Ponder Election Date

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will have a quiet August to determine whether he wants to hold an election this fall or wait for spring.

The prime minister attended his last cabinet session before September Thursday and his office said he has only two public functions scheduled for the rest of the summer.

He leaves today for the economic summit meeting in Bonn, West Germany. And he goes to the Edmonton Commonwealth Games Aug. 3-6.

Other than that there is nothing on his official calender until the cabinet meeting of Sept. 3. He is keeping secret his vacation plans.

During that period he will have much to think about and to talk with his advisers. Speculation that he will opt for a fall election is growing, despite his attempts to dampen it.

Recent developments have provided a boost for the speculation. They include:

—The most recent Gallup public opinion poll says the spread between the Liberals and the Conservatives has increased.

—The Liberals are reported to have commissioned a new private poll to test their popularity. The prime minister's office has refused to comment on the report.

—The Conference Board in Canada predicted Thursday that unemployment will reach more than nine per cent next year. The prime minister may want to get an election out of the way before those figures can be reached.

If the prime minister did opt for a fall election, it probably would be held Oct. 16, when eight byelections now are scheduled. He would call such an election in August.

There also is speculation that Trudeau will decide to shuffle his cabinet before Parliament sits again Oct. 10, or before an election.

He has a stock answer to questions about an election date—it will be between now and next July. He must call an election by then.

He puzzled some Liberals in Vancouver recently by saying that he feels they want an early election and "we will win it." He didn't say what he meant by that.

Speculators are wondering if there is significance in the fact that he has suggested a first ministers meeting Sept. 13-15 to discuss constitutional change.

Would he seek such a meeting if an election campaign was expected at that time?

Last May Trudeau scrubbed a spring election when the Gallup showed that the Conservatives and Liberals were equal.

He sought then to stop election speculation. When he was asked by reporter why he felt that a spring, 1979, election was more likely than one in the fall, he said:

"The main reason, quite honestly, is because I would hope to avoid a new series of press conferences and speculations in the House and cranking up of electoral machinery for the fall, and then, if there is not an election, it would have to be cranked down and we would have to begin again in the spring.

"I really wish everybody would forget about elections now that we have had really two false starts and say the day the writs are issued, 'Gee, the election is on; let's start running.'"

But then he acknowledged that there was a possibility of a fall election.

Talk of a cabinet shuffle is the result of the fact that Justice Minister Ron Basford and Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer will retire as soon as the election is over.

The speculation says that Trudeau may want to put a new face on his cabinet in advance of an election.

But Busy Time On MP Queries

OTTAWA (CP) — While MPs have deserted Ottawa for holidays or summer electioneering, thousands of tax dollars are being spent to answer questions they left behind.

Their queries range from the cost of operating Toronto's CN Tower to the amount the federal government spent on taxis last year.

Every MP is entitled to request an answer in writing to any question he wishes to submit about the operations of the federal government. The government is not obliged to answer these questions but it answers most.

During the last sitting of Parliament 2,003 questions were put on the Commons order paper. Of these 1,440 were answered during the sitting. Government officials say replies for the remaining 563 will be ready by the scheduled resumption of Parliament next October.

No one knows how much this service costs the public.

Five years ago, Mitchell Sharp, then president of the Privy Council, asked his staff make an estimate. They calculated $60 for the simplest—one that could be answered by getting a single set of facts from one government department.

But many of the questions are less straightforward, requiring months of digging in as many as 130 government departments, boards and agencies. For instance, Progressive Conservative MP Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock) put one question on the order paper last February that took two pages merely in the asking.

Furthermore, the $60 price tag is five years out-of-date and researchers' salaries have gone up substantially since 1973.

Bob Lay, government official in charge of getting answers for the raft of questions submitted by MPs every year, says he could not even guess at the cost now.

RECALL LEGISLATURE - GRIT

REGINA (CP) — Liberal Leader Ted Malone on Friday called on Premier Allan Blakeney to reconvene the Saskatchewan legislature to bring an end to the current province-wide construction strike.

If the legislature was called back into session, Malone said he would be prepared to assist in passing joint bargaining legislation similar to that already in effect for construction industry bargaining in four other provinces.

Malone said it is obvious that the Construction and General Laborers Union and the Saskatchewan Labor Relations Council are making no headway in their negotiations.

If there was any progress shown in talks held the last three days, he said, the parties would have not adjourned their talks for one week but would have continued bargaining Friday.

"I'm not surprised at this impasse considering the ill-timed remark of Labor Minister Gordon Snyder who accused the contractors of being responsible for the strike and all of the problems in the industry," Malone said in a release.

The strike-lockout situation has shut down construction for two months, with the laborers union being the only one not to have signed a new contract.

Are Your Children "Growing Like Weeds"?

They tend to do that! And it costs no small fortune to bring up a family! It's not just the food and clothing — it's all the things from diaper pails to Jolly Jumpers to Barbie doll sets, bikes and hockey games. Some of these things are probably gathering dust in your basement or garage right now (and taking up space). You'll never get back what you paid for them, but why not

Secret Immigration Changes: Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian immigration policies are changing so quietly that lawyers are unaware today of what the policy will be tomorrow, says Mendel Green, a Toronto lawyer who deals with immigration matters.

"Lawyers who specialize in immigration are practising at their peril," Green said in an interview Thursday.

Policies are continually changing without warning, he said.

"There is a senior officialdom in Ottawa secretly changing policies.

"I have found senior Metro officials in immigration who don't know about them. I am convinced the minister is not aware that this policy is not going to the public and people are not being warned."

Green said the policies he refers to concern applications for landed immigrant status from within the country. Hundreds of people who are part-way through the process are being told they must go home or face deportation, he said.

"What's new is that they (immigration officials) are doing it without warning."

He gave as an example the Korean parents of Canadian residents who came on a visit hoping to stay if they liked it here.

"They decided they want to stay but now the children, who are the sole support of the parents, must send them all the way back to Korea and pay for their keep over there while the application is processed."

Another example, he said, is a youth from India about to enter Grade 13 and who has drawn straight As in a Canadian school for three years.

"He's already been adopted but all the paperwork isn't finished and it is being suggested to him that he should go home and wait."

Peter Current, an immigration department assistant in Ottawa, said policy has not changed.

"All we are doing is exercising closer scrutiny over which cases should be accorded special, compassionate grounds."

Visitors used to be able to apply for immigrant status and, if they failed to qualify, could appeal to a board that was set up in 1967.

An appeal backlog grew and by 1973 an appeal could take up to 10 years to be processed.

Too many people abused the policy, Current said.

In 1973, the right to appeal was restricted and the right to apply within the country was eliminated, except in cases where compassionate and humanitarian considerations were warranted.

GROUPS OKAYED

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Supreme Court has ruled that religious groups can use public school buildings without violating the U.S. constitutional separation of church and state. In a 5-to-2 decision, the court said religious groups deserve the same renting privileges available to other non-profit organizations that fairly reimburse school boards.

Weddings

Kelbough — Jaques

Reverend D. R. Stiven officiated at the double-ring ceremony in Gordon United Church on March 25, 1978, at 3 p.m., when Pamela Maureen, daughter of Mrs. D. Jaques and the late Mr. Bruce Jaques exchanged vows with Robert Gordon Kelbough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Kelbough.

Given in marriage by her grandfather Mr. Chas. Dreger of Calgary, the bride had chosen an elegant gown of silk organza over taffeta. Silk lace appliques adorned the yoke of the fitted bodice, and fine lace enhanced the empire waist and the high neckline outlined with pleated frill. This trim was repeated on the cuffs of the long slim sleeves. The "A" line skirt was emphasized with scrolls of matching lace and swept from the waist entrain. A full cathedral veil of silk illusion tulle, bordered with lace misted from a pearl embroidered headpiece, to complete the picture of a radiant and happy bride. She carried a cascade of bouquet of red sweetheart roses. Maid of Honour, sister of the bride, Wendy Jaques, bridesmaids: sisters of the groom, Janice and Colleen Kelbough, a friend of the bride and groom, Ann Gonte, and the little flower-girl, cousin of the bride from Regina, Angie Dreger, wore identical gowns of light blue, all sewn by themselves, and carried cascade bouquets of pink and white carnations, — the flower-girl carried a basket of carnations. Mr. John Main and David Henderson attended as best men, and ushers were Cal Campbell and Jeff Jaques. The mother of the bride was attired in a green gown with a corsage of white and green orchids. The groom's mother wore a pink gown with a corsage of pink orchids.

The reception was held at the Juan de Fuca Senior Citizens Centre. Mr. Ian Cudlup proposed the toast to the bride and everyone danced to the music of Denny's Canned Music. The bride and groom cut the cake with a knife, belonging to the bride's great-grandfather, that had been used many times for such special occasions. A number of friends and relatives attended from Manitoba, Sask. and Alberta. Following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Kelbough left for a two week honeymoon in Hawaii. For going away, the bride wore her own sewn dress of orange with a cape of floral chiffon, white and orange orchid corsage and white accessories. The happy couple now reside in Victoria.

McKenzie — Jaques

Father W. J. O'Brien officiated at the double-ring ceremony in Our Lady of the Rosary Church on April 22, 1978, at 5 p.m. when Wendy Lynn Jaques, daughter of Mrs. D. Jaques, and the late Mr. Bruce Jaques, exchanged vows with John McKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don McKenzie.

Given in marriage by her brother, Jeffrey Jaques, the bride had chosen an elegant gown of silk organza over taffeta. Venice lace generously accented the keyhole neckline, full bodice and long sleeves. The flared "A" line skirt which fell to a chapel length train and the cuffs were deeply flounced in crystal pleats. A matching headdress of baby pleats held a two-tier nylon illusion veil edged with sheer lace. A scatter of daisies trimmed the hemline and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and white carnations. For something old, the bride wore her mother's single string of pearls, a bridal gift from her husband. Matron of honour Mrs. Pam Kelbough, sister of the bride; bridesmaid, friend of the bride and groom Vicki Foster, wore gowns of buttercup yellow sewn by themselves. The little flower-girl, cousin of the bride, from Regina Angie Dreger, wore a matching floral gown. They carried bouquets of spring flowers on fans. Mr. Cameron Gordon-Finlay attended as best man, and ushers were Mike McKenzie and Roy Coburn. The mother of the bride chose a blue gown with a corsage of pink and white carnations. The groom's mother wore a mint gown with a corsage of white carnations.

The reception was held at the Church Hall. Mr. Mike McKenzie proposed the toast to the bride and everyone danced to the music of the Wanderers. The bride and groom cut the cake with a knife, belonging to the bride's late great grandfather, that had been used on such occasions many times. A number of friends and relatives attended from Halifax, Sask., and Alberta. A second recepton was held in Calgary, April 29, 1978 for relatives and friends from Man., Alberta and Sask.

Erb — Leonard

St. Michaels and All Angels Church in Saanich was the setting for a lovely summer wedding on June 10, 1978. Rev. W. J. Hill officiated at the double ring ceremony uniting Teresa Elaine Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Leonard of Victoria, and Dale Lawrence Erb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brian Erb of Victoria.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and was given in marriage by both parents. The bride was radiant in her empire styled gown of polyester organza. Imported Venice lace graced a sculptured neckline, bodice and bishop sleeves. A full length two-tier veil misted down from a floral headpiece to complement her cathedral train. Her bouquet of yellow roses and white stephanotis completed the picture. The matron of honour was Mrs. Elaine Leonard, and bridesmaids were Ms. Sharon Leonard, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Kay McCulloch. They wore identical gowns of shrimp polyester accented with lace trim and matching capes. Each wore scattered flowers in their hair and carried colonial bouquets. Cheryle Bryan, cousin of the bride, was the adorable flower-girl dressed in pale yellow polyester, and carried a small colonial bouquet. The groom was handsomely attired in a fashionable beige tuxedo. The groom's best man was Mr. Toni McCulloch. Mr. Frank Leonard, brother of the bride, and Mr. Chris Erb, brother of the groom, were the ushers. All wore beige tuxedos with yellow rosebuds complementing their lapels. Mr. Keith Cooper sang "Bless Our Hearts Together" after the ceremony.

Guests enjoyed a buffet dinner with the happy couple at Gordon Head Recreation Centre. The Master of Ceremonies was Mr. Jack Walters, who introduced Mr. Mel McInnis who proposed the toast to the bride. An out-of-town guest Dr. M. R. Smart, gave grace. Messrs. Walters, McInnis and Smart are close family friends. For her going away outfit, the bride wore a three piece beige gabardine suit and a beautiful corsage. After a honeymoon at Harrison Hot Springs, Teresa and Dale are residing in their lovely new home in Victoria, B.C.

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT
Number 66 — Congratulations to whoever was responsible for having a British Columbia Railway Rail Diesel Car brought over for the special Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway July 11th trip to Courtenay. You City's Watchdog understands that the Canadian Pacific Railway for years has stated they could supply an extra car if needed, within 24 hours. Yet when asked to do so for this special trip said they did not have one available. Your City's Watchdog is hoping that an organization will be able to charter the Dayliner for a special historic trip to Nanaimo on Sunday, August 6th and anyone wishing to travel on this trip should leave their name, phone number. A warning to Shuttlebus users, your Watchdog spoke to Doug and Sheila who were waiting for a shuttlebus at Douglas and Fisgard at 4:15 p.m., after making enquiries it was found that the last Shuttlebus makes its last trip at 4:05 p.m. not 4:30 p.m. asadvertised in the newspaper. If you wish information regarding city matters please continue to phone 383-6259 Your City's Watchdog C. Joe Richards. Postscript: Many thanks to the staff of Victoria General Hospital and especially Dr. Ray Harding on Monday, July 10th.

308A CARD OF THANKS

IN APPRECIATION
Words are inadequate to express our sincere thanks to our many friends for the compassion and sympathy shown to us in so many ways in the loss of our beloved husband, father, and grandfather. The Family of James Algin Lonsbury.
The kindness and sympathy of our friends and relatives, their floral tributes and cards of sympathy have indeed been a source of comfort. A special thanks to the Rev. Dobson and the staff at Saanich Peninsula Hospital. Mrs. Holly Gordon and family.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their kind expressions of sympathy in the loss of a dear husband and father, Arthur Bayne. Our thanks to Dr. Scott Wallace. — Peggy and Arthur Bayne.

300 IN MEMORIAM

HANSEN — Martin Henry, in loving memory of my dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away July 15, 1976.

309 IN MEMORIAM

KELLOW — In loving memory of our dear daughter Bonnie Lynn (nee Swetnam) who passed away on July 16th, 1974.

We saw you fading like a flower,
But could not make you stay,
We nursed you with tender kindness
Until God called you away.
It broke our hearts to lose you.
You did not go alone,
For part of us went with you
The day he called you home.

STEWART— In loving memory of my dear James S. Stewart, who passed away at Victoria, B.C. on July 17th, 1975.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
— WITH GRATITUDE. SANDS

Hungry Thief Sentenced

A penniless, 21-year-old man who stole a piece of cheese because he was hungry was given a six-month suspended sentence when he appeared before Judge Fred Green in provincial court Friday.

Peter Hogg, no fixed address, had pleaded guilty earlier in the week to taking the cheese, worth $1.23, from a city grocery store. He'd been in jail two weeks awaiting sentence.

Ross-Smith said the accused had a history of family and mental problems and seemed incapable of coping with life in a realistic fashion.

Crown counsel Donald Laughton, who said Hogg has been living in a shed at the rear of someone's property in Victoria, agreed with Ross-Smith that Hogg needs more help than punishment.

In passing sentence, Green took into consideration defence counsel Barry Mah Ming's comment that Hogg probably couldn't stand another two weeks in custody.

CONTROLS WANTED ON RAILWAY LANDS

The Capital Regional District planning committtee recommended Friday the rezoning of all railway rights-of-way in the district for transportation use.

Committee chairman Murray Glazier wants to ensure tight control of future use of the property when the railways sell it.

If the CRD board agrees and amends its official plan, developers will have to apply to the district for rezoning.

Glazier said the rights-of-way between the Wye, the railway junction by Town and Country, and Colwood are the "most critical transportation link in the region and an essential option for a public transit corridor."

Glazier would also like to see pedestrian walkways or bike paths on the Canadian National Railways and E&N rights-of-way.

The CNR has not operated trains on the 80 km route to Deerholme, south of Duncan, for several years and now has received formal approval from the Canadian Transport Commission to abandon the route.

Great Lakes Dying, Says $20M IJC Report

TORONTO (CP) — Pollution is killing the Great Lakes and control measures planned now will not be enough to save them, says a comprehensive international study.

The study by the International Joint Commission (IJC) took three years to complete and cost $20 million.

Despite billions of dollars spent on pollution controls, the massive problem "will undoubtedly continue," says the study report, to be made public at the commission's annual meeting Monday in Windsor, Ont.

The report warns that the 37 million people living around the five lakes must face an even tougher and more expensive pollution war to save the world's largest body of formerly fresh water.

Eight years ago, Canada and the United States jointly embarked upon a plan to combat pollution in the Great Lakes and more than $3 billion has been committed to that effort.

The report says that simply applying pollution controls on known municipal and industrial sewers will not curb enough pollution to save the lakes, particularly Ontario and Erie.

Phosphorus, a chemical which causes rapid growth of algae that gobbles up oxygen and harbors diseases, has led to sections of Lake Erie officially being considered dead. More than 29,000 tons of it are entering Lakes Ontario and Erie each year.

The report says a third of the phosphorus entering the two lakes comes from non-specific sources such as street run-off and farming. It estimates Canada and the U.S. must spend $106 million each year to control the known and non-specific sources.

The report says new laws to combat pollution are not needed—they already exist but are not being enforced.

Canada and the U.S. are preparing to sign a new agreement on pollution control in the Great Lakes.

Log Barge Launched By M-B

A $14.1 million self-propelled log barge built for MacMillan Bloedel was launched at Yarrows shipyard Friday.

The vessel, not yet named, will be operated by Kingcome Navigation, a MacMillan Bloedel subsidiary.

That vessel carries 15,000 tons of logs and completes the trip from the Queen Charlotte Islands to Powell River in 45 hours — 30 hours quicker than a conventional barge pulled by a tug.

Meanwhile, Pacific Logging, a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific, is planning a logship and has not yet announced where it will be constructed.

Neil Hindle, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, said it is important to the local economy to have these logging vessels constructed in B.C.

Staff 'Running Scared' in Fisheries Fuss

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal fisheries department in charge of B.C.'s $360-million fishing industry is undergoing personnel changes, and some industry sources say the resulting conflict is "one of the most dangerous situations for the future of fisheries in the last 10 years."

The changes began last year in the 900-employee West Coast department when Dr. Glen Geen, head of the Pacific Region fisheries, was fired and replaced by W. E. Johnson, a scientist-administrator who was brought in from the department's biological station at Nanaimo.

Johnson has instituted a reorganized responsibilities of key staff and rearranged chains of command among staff responsible for fisheries management, which includes such matters as licensing, fish quotas, fishing openings and closures, and among biological staff who provide the scientific data on which many fisheries decisions are based.

The friction came to a head about two weeks ago with the removal of Dick Crouter as acting field services director. Since then, several other senior personnel have quit or taken leaves of absence.

Management biologist A. W. Argue quit after 14 years service on "a matter of principle," saying he was against "the poor treatment of senior people" and the new separation taking place between management and biology workers.

Argue said the "effectiveness of this region for fisheries management is being impinged on by the structure being set-up," which he said is a return to outmoded policies of 30 years ago.

"There is a sickness in all levels of the fisheries service with everyone running scared," he said.

He said biologists must work on a team approach with the managers, who must finally make the decisions.

Under the new structures, said Argue, even if the scientist is in a management section, his actual boss at the top is a scientist who can overrule the managers.

For example, he said, in the salmon enhancement program, some of the biology proposals from the department's research station at Nanaimo had no relevance to good management of the salmon fisheries.

A main factor of fisheries department conflict poses the advocates of maximum sustained yield against those who stress "best-use" or optimum sustained yield which leaves a wide margin of safety, the approach backed by Crouter and his supporters.

The shuffling going on in the Pacific region has been described as "bureaucratic meddling from Ottawa" by Henry Frew, editor-publisher of the fishermen's bible, Western Fisheries. He says he is incensed at the "emasculation" of the team approach which managed the fisheries "for best use or return for the West Coast or nation as a whole."

Regional head Dr. Johnson is away on holidays and could not be reached for comment this week. However, Dave MacEachran, assistant deputy minister of fisheries, said in Ottawa the charge of undue Ottawa interference is untrue, that the situation is strictly a "regional management issue," and that there are no plans to downgrade economic aspects.

MacEachran said that although Crouter had not been selected by Johnson to remain as regional fisheries services director, he is being placed as acting director-general of the Ottawa-based fishery services directorate, a position open because of a retirement. Crouter's replacement in the Pacific region is Ron MacLeod, who had been director of the salmon enhancement program.

MacLeod, who is filling in during Dr. Johnson's absence, said the new organizational divisions will not allow scientific issues to take priority over economic realities.

However, industry observers are skeptical.

"It's a well-known fact that there's more over-fishing in locales where scientists have the main impetus in decision-making," said one observer.

"We have seen the results of purely biological management in the past," said Frew. "The Nanaimo scientists told us we were not overfishing herring in the 60s, and look what the result was. We are already hearing that some scientists say we can safely fish 200,000-ton herring quotas again. Will the stock stand it a second time?"

More Terror Raids

TURIN (AP) — Seven armed terrorists stormed a government computer centre today, locked 14 employees in a room and set fire to the electronic equipment, police reported. They said damage was heavy but there were no injuries.

A few hours later, another terrorist squad made a daring raid on a police station near Rome in a search for weapons, police said. One officer was injured.

They were the latest in a series of such assaults on government facilities, mostly in northern Italy, since leaders of the Red Brigade urban guerrilla group were convicted of terrorism-related crimes in Turin last month.

The seven Turin raiders, some masked and one of them a woman, dashed into the Piedmont regional government computer offices, forced the 14 workers into a small room next to the main office, then splashed equipment with gasoline and set it afire, police said. They said firebombs the terrorists left behind failed to ignite.

An anonymous caller later told the Italian news agency ANSA that the raid had been carried out by Front Line, police said.

In the later attack, two men and two women raided a police office at a railroad station in Ciampino, a community 20 kilometres south of Rome, police said.

Prisoner Switch Soon

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The Canada-United States prisoner exchange program is swinging into action with the first exchanges scheduled for late August, a spokesman for the Canadian Penitentiary Service said Friday.

Jack Stewart, Pacific region information officer, said in an interview information booklets are being distributed to U.S. nationals serving sentences in federal institutions in B.C.

The booklets are expected to be mailed to provincial corrections centres within the next two weeks.

Stewart said the American government will send an attorney and public defender later in the month to interview Americans wishing to take part in the unprecedented program which stems from a historic treaty signed by both countries on March 2, 1977.

Under the treaty Canadians held in American prisons and Americans in Canadian jails have the opportunity to serve the balance of their sentences in their own countries.

There are 33 Americans in federal institutions in B.C. out of a total prisoner population of 1,400. Three are at the medium security prison at William Head and one at the community centre on Pandora.

Eight are in the B.C. Penitentiary, 13 at Matsqui, three at Mountain Prison, two in the regional psychiatric centre in the Fraser Valley and one each at Agassiz work camp, the regional reception centre at the B.C. Pen, and Mission Institution.

A precise figure of the number of Americans in the provincial system is not known but last year 139 of the 34,975 admissions were U.S. citizens. Most were for relatively minor offences.

Stewart said there are about 80 Canadians serving time in American jails and about 35 are expected to apply for exchange.

He expects the same ratio of Americans will opt for the program here.

The program sets out certain eligibility standards, Stewart said. It is not open to those persons who have been convicted of crimes not generally punishable in the other's country, for example where the offence is a breach of provincial statutes, immigration laws or a purely military offence.

Neither is it open to those inmates awaiting trial or who are in the process of appealing conviction, or who have less than six months to serve before their sentence is expired.

SNOOPY PHONES featuring stars of the popular Peanuts comic strip will soon be sold in the state of Pennsylvania if the Public Utility Commission accepts the filed tariffs.

Victoria Hospitals Short of Nurses

There is a nursing shortage in Victoria this summer but it is not serious enough to close any wards at this time, Royal Jubilee Hospital associate director Michael Fraser said today.

He was commenting on a news report that four wards at St. Paul's in Vancouver are closed because of the nurse shortage.

Fraser said the situation could worsen but at the moment Jubilee is able to keep all wards open.

"It is not as bad as in some previous years because there is a surplus of nurses in the community. Also we are helped because elective surgery cases tend to wait until the fall. They don't want to be in hospital in the summer time."

Jubilee nursing director Elizabeth Moore said the summer shortage is the result of many factors.

"Many married nurses on call during the school year are not available in the summer because they want to spend the time with their children.

"Single ones tend to travel in the summer. Nurses are a migratory breed. They tend to resign in June or early July and then start working some place else in September."

While there is a general surplus of nurses in the community, there is a shortage of some with specialized skills.

"As a result, we're really short of staff this summer but we are keeping all wards open — so far."

A spokesman for Victoria General said the hospital did not plan to close any wards this summer although it, too, has a staff shortage.

Indians Prefer To Fight Alone

CRANBROOK (CP) — Several Indian bands in British Columbia, as well as the American Indian Movement (AIM) have expressed interest in helping the St. Mary's Indian band here in its dispute with CP Rail, Lloyd Lezard, band administrator, said Thursday.

However, the band has told AIM that it wants to keep the issue at a local level, "so they backed off," Lezard said.

BANK OFFERS 'FREE' AUTOS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A small bank with a big imagination has devised a unique gimmick for attracting new depositors — offering a $27,000 Mercedes-Benz instead of interest payments.

There are only two prerequisites. You must deposit at least $65,000 for seven years or $400,000 for a year.

If you can swing that kind of cash, a new Mercedes sport coupe 450 SL, complete with tape deck, is yours.

If you don't want the luxury car, the bank will give you $27,000 in advance interest on your deposit.

The Bank of Columbia, which ranks 11th in size out of 16 District of Columbia banks with assets of $47 million, began offering the car deal July 5 after heeding a suggestion from the bank's advertising firm.

"It has created an awful lot of interest," said James Brockett, the bank president and chairman of the board.

In fact, he said, after a small mention of the deal showed up in a nationally circulated business newspaper last week the bank fielded 128 telephone inquiries during a 24 hour period from potential depositors living as far away as California, Florida, Michigan and Ohio.

So far, banks officials said, three persons have promised to wire the necessary funds.

If enough people want in on the new program, the bank acknowledges it may be hard-pressed to come up with enough cars.

Incidentally, bank officials freely acknowledge that a depositor would come out far ahead if he put $65,000 into the bank and collected interest in the traditional manner — compounded daily at 7 percent.

After seven years, the accumulated interest would be about $39,000 — $12,000 more than the cost of the car.

Vapors Cover Town

TRENTO, Italy (UPI) — Lightning struck a chemical factory Friday night, sending a cloud of sodium vapors over the city that caused skin and eye irritations to many of the city's 97,000 inhabitants.

Authorities considered evacuating the whole city but said at dawn the situation was under control.

Officials said lightning set fire to 200 barrels containing a total 20 tons of sodium, and rainwater combined with the chemical into a cloud of caustic sodium hydroxide.

The fire brigades, unable to use water that would have released even more vapors, used tons of cement powder to put out the flames and prevent them from spreading to a department producing highly poisonous lead tetraethyl, used as an additive in gasoline.

Residents wearing gauze masks or handkerchiefs over their faces as protection against the caustic fumes rushed into the streets Friday night to move their cars into garages or out of the city.

Bilingual Bureacracy? Statistics Show Otherwise

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has officially declared 1978 the year the public service became "irreversibly bilingual."

In trying to achieve that goal, the government has taught French to more English-speaking public servants between 1964 and 1977 than there are bilingual jobs currently occupied.

But it appears there is no surplus of "bilingual anglos," as they are nicknamed in the national capital. There are almost 9,000 unilingual English-Canadians holding jobs designated as bilingual. As well, there are 16,000 positions designated as bilingual which are vacant.

English-Canadians comprise 73.8 per cent of the public service but hold less than half of the 52,000 occupied bilingual positions, treasury board statistics reveal.

Fifty-three per cent of the occupied bilingual posts are held by French-Canadians, most of whom spoke English before being hired.

Within the last 14 years, about 55,000 English-Canadian and 10,000 French-Canadian government employees received language training at public expense, many at full salary while attending classes for several months.

Where are all the graduates now? A check with several government offices failed to reveal an answer. Presumably, some are still daily saying "hello" and "bonjour," while others died, retired, changed jobs or returned to the world of unilingualism.

For example, 168 English-speaking public servants taking language training last fall planned to retire within five years. Forty-four of them planned to retire within a year.

Labelling such situations "horror stories," Progressive Conservative MPs have unearthed dozens of similar examples in recent years of what they term over-zealous attempts by the government to create an irreversibly bilingual public service.

Establishing the costs of creating a bilingual public service are difficult. One indication is the expenditure for government-run language training programs, which between 1964 and 1977 cost at least $398 million.

But this figure is conservative compared to the real cost of maintaining bilingualism. All federal programs associated with bilingualism in the 1977-78 fiscal year exceeded $500 million.

A bilingual public service carries two major connotations — that, wherever feasible, Canadians be served by the government in his or her mother tongue and that government employees be allowed to work in either French or English and face no discrimination in advancement because of linguistic origin.

Max Yalden, official languages commissioner, agrees that there have been vast improvements in the language of service aspect since the government jumped on the bilingual bandwagon in the early 1960s.

Improvements have been slower in trying to establish French and English as equally respected languages of work within public service corridors.

In his last annual report to Parliament, Yalden said:

"Although we believe that the criticism our office has levelled over the years at the government language policy in the matter of service to the public has not been misplaced, there has in fact been undeniable and even substantial progress in this area.

"By comparison, and with due respect to outstanding exceptions, the development of a successful language-of-work policy is barely beyond the embryonic stage.

"In other words, we are still a long way from resolving the very difficult problem of how to achieve a situation in which, generally speaking, public servants may work in the language of their choice, especially if that language is French."

Yalden continues by saying that English still overwhelmingly dominates as the language of communication in the public service, often even among French-Canadians.

Although French-Canadians hold 53 per cent of all bilingual positions, English-Canadians maintain a firm grasp, 80 per cent, of the top 1,000 bilingual executive posts.

French-Canadians are bunched at the bottom end of the bilingual ladder. Seventy per cent of the lowest ranking bilingual jobs are held by French-Canadians.

For the government to maintain its so-called irreversibly bilingual public service, it will need a steady stream of new bilingual faces.

Yalden says there may be a shortage of these faces after the government abandons its language training program in 1983.

Robert Andras, treasury board president, disagrees, saying public schools will be churning out enough bilingual graduates by that time to fill government requirements, which will be largely unchanged from current needs.

Biorythms 'Science' Worthless - Professor

NEW YORK (CP) — A University of Washington professor says the so-called science of biorythms, which holds that people's behavior is influenced by biological and mental cycles, is worthless.

William Bainbridge, a professor of sociology at the University of Washington at Seattle, makes the statement in an article published in the latest issue of the Skeptical Inquirer, a magazine published by a group which investigates paranormal claims.

Bainbridge calls biorythms a pseudoscience. He outlines nine separate tests he conducted to test the validity of the theory, all of which failed.

The theory holds that people's lives are shaped by precise rythms that begin with birth. They are a 23-day physical cycle, a 28-day emotional cycle and 33-day intellectual cycle. These cycles are said to oscillate up and down throughout life, producing highs (good days) and lows (bad days).

Days when cycles change are said to be "critical" days, when people are more prone to mishaps.

Bainbridge notes that the calculations required to work out biorythm charts can be done with specially-programmed pocket calculators, with computers or by hand. This, he says, makes biorythm charts ideal, as well as lucrative for what he calls pseudo-professionals.

He said a number of books have been published on the subject and sales of calculators and personal computerized printouts run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Some newspapers print daily biorythm columns.

(The Victoria Times introduced the daily Biodex column to its readers several months ago, but with a specific disclaimer that it had any scientific validity. At that time it was stated that both the Biodex feature and the daily horoscope were run because a number of people found them entertaining and interesting).

UFO Agency Eyed

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Prime Minister Sir Eric Gairy of the Caribbean island of Grenada has asked the UN General Assembly to take up his favorite subject — flying saucers — for the second year at its meeting opening in September. Gairy succeeded in getting unidentified flying objects discussed at the 1977 session. Now he is proposing creation of a UN agency or department monitoring data on "flying objects and related phenomena."

Hazardous Baby Cribs Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials say they are searching for 176 baby cribs with potentially hazardous plastic teething bars imported from the United States since 1976.

A consumer affairs spokesman said Friday the search follows an announcement by the U.S. Products Safety Commission that 80,000 cribs manufactured by Okla Homer Smith Manufacturing Co. Inc. of Arkansas are equipped with the bars.

The bars become brittle with age and pose the danger of a child eating or inhaling plastic shards, United States studies said. Three injuries were reported in the U.S..

The spokesman said the retailers have been notified and can offer replacing the bars when they are found. The cribs were imported by two Canadian baby furniture retailers: Ned's Baby and Children's Furniture Co. Ltd. of Toronto and Merit International Sales Ltd. of Burnaby.

The bars were produced between June and December, 1976, and are marked with the manufacturers name.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, July 16
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on reaching beyond supposed limitation. You're able now to break free, to express, imprint, let others know you are present and that you intend to leave an indelible mark. Aquarius, Taurus, Leo persons figure prominently — so does the number 4.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get to heart of matters — Aries individual figures in scenario. Lunar accent on finances of partner or mate, physical and psychic responses, how to deal with revelations, secrets, confidences and confessions. Check fine print regarding rentals, leases, sales, purchases.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lie low, go slow, be diplomatic, deal with joint proposals, co-operative efforts, partnership, marriage. Taurus, Libra, Aries figure prominently — and so does the number 6. Important home, domestic adjustment could be on agenda.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You get nothing for nothing, despite entreaties from fast-talking individual. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Define terms, steer away from self-deception. Accent on preparation, special procedures, basic time and costs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can successfully "close a deal." Means transaction is completed — with terms favorable to you. Aries, Libra and the number 9 figure prominently. Read between the lines. Re-establish your authority.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New approach to ideas and relatives would be constructive. Adhere to principles, fresh concepts. Stress originality — stand tall, realize your own worth. Promote self-esteem. Leo, Aquarius persons are part of dynamic, exciting personal scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on adaptability, intuition, locating lost articles, protecting personal possessions. Income potential is highlighted. Money is coming your way. Know it and be confident. Rise above petty quarrels, jealousy. You're going to win!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Events prove fortuitous; pieces fall into place. Elements of luck, timing ride with you. Take initiative, stress independence, originality, pioneering spirit. Expand horizons. Refuse to be limited, restricted or stymied by tradition. Create your own tradition!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What seems inevitable is not necessarily so — know it and act accordingly. You are on brink of discovery, not setback. Get behind scenes for valid answers, appraisals. A dream, properly interpreted, can provide valuable insights.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on pleasure, romance, creative endeavors, relationship that is intensified. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons are in picture. You get wish. A note or message aids in fulfilling promise. Friend fulfills "mission."

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): You're given assignment calling for diplomacy, knowledge of budgets, monetary affairs. Family member can aid. Superior makes waves — in your behalf. There is room for you at more elevated position. You'll become more aware of it.

IF JULY 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, spiritual, moody, temperamental, a perfectionist. You are sensitive, sensual, fond of food, the esoteric and the mantic arts and sciences. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles in your life. Social life accelerates in September, when you could travel due to unusual or offschedule vacation. You meet new people during July and could fall madly in love.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, July 17
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look ahead, beyond the immediate. Accent on philosophical concepts, spiritual insights, travel, publishing, education, change, variety, special relationship. Key is creativity, analysis, ability to piece together bits of information. Complete story is available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make adjustments in domestic area. Another Taurus — and a Scorpio — could figure prominently. Some of your best qualities surge forward — and you receive "psychic rewards." You get lively responses. No person will be indifferent!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on resolving mystery, clarifying legal jargon, reaching understanding with partner or mate. Pisces, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Avoid trap of believing someone wants to give you something for nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stress practicality; eschew schemes, whispers of sweet nothings. Maintain balance, elevate self-esteem. Capricorn — and another Cancer — play key roles in your scenario. You'll gain access to valid estimates, appraisals. The number 8 figures prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Creative juices flow; your methods, individuality shine bright. Aries, Libra and the number 9 figure prominently. You complete assignment, prestige swings upward, views are vindicated and others will know it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take new steps to build, to achieve basic goal. Older family member wants to impose views. Be gracious, but adhere to your own findings, principles, beliefs. Make your own mistakes! Leo, Aquarius individuals are in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mental activity accelerates — movement, trips, ideas, psychic impressions abound. Highlight humor, versatility. One who teaches — in best sense — becomes an ally. In actuality, there is no stopping you! Relative utters some wise-sounding words. Be careful!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on money, possessions, lost articles and how to locate them. You gain valuable insights. Suddenly, restrictions are lifted. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently — and so does the number 3. Individual who "understands" finances will appear on scene.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get rid of superfluous material. Streamline procedures. Set sights on goal, outline basic lessons. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Moon in your sign promotes initiative, courage of convictions, added recognition.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Illumination replaces dullness, shadowy outlines. You get a chance to view backstage secrets. You could gain access to privileged information. Accent on dreams, illusions, clandestine meeting. Be analytical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on wish that is fulfilled, money surprise gift for purpose of harmonizing family relationships. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Friendly gesture now can "move mountains." Know it and act accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One "in command" seeks your counsel. Take time to correct. Avoid wishful thinking — relate facts as they exist. Promotion possible as you receive credit due. Another Piscean is in picture. You have a secret ally.

IF JULY 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have talent for organization. You have natural executive ability. You know how to bring priorities into focus. Capricorn, Cancer persons play key roles in your life. You travel in August and you make valuable social contacts. You have birth pattern which indicates you are capable of accumulating a fortune.

Tardy 'News' Costly

The news finally got here Friday, but it was more than a day old and it cost Canadian taxpayers $31, including $13 for cab fare.

The federal office of the co-ordinator of multilateral trade negotiations sent reporters in the legislative press gallery here 32 news releases in English and five in French, outlining progress in trade talks going on in Geneva, Switzerland.

The release was to have been made public at 2 p.m. Thursday in Ottawa. The two-pound package arrived at the press gallery about 5 p.m. Friday, a half hour after all but two reporters had departed for the weekend.

Before The Judge

A Langford man was fined $75 in provincial court Friday by Judge Fred Green after pleading guilty to possession of a weapon endangering people and property.

Dennis Buchner, 18, of 2882 Jacklin Road, was charged March 30 after he used a pellet gun to shoot at a dog and a propane tank.

Court was told that one of Buchner's shots was apparently aimed at a propane tank across the street but instead the pellet lodged in a passing car just behind the driver's head.

A British citizen illegally in Canada was sentenced by to 45 days in Wilkinson Road jail.

The visitor said he was sharing his room in the City Centre Motel on Douglas Street with Mueller.

The articles were returned to the visitor after Mueller was arrested in a youth hostel with the items in his possession.

Mueller would have to face an immigration hearing soon, court was told.

Gray said the dog was half-fox and half miniature collie, and squeezed through a professionally-built fence.

"How much did you pay for the dog to be released (from the pound)?" Green asked.

"Sixty-two dollars," Gray replied.

Cool to Statehood

SAN JUAN (AP) — A poll conducted in the United States by Puerto Rico's pro-statehood government shows only 20 per cent of those responding favor making the commonwealth the 51st state. Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo said 32 per cent favored continuation of Puerto Rico's present status, 29 per cent favored independence and the rest gave no preference.

Orange Smog Shrouds L.A.

OIL COMPANY GREED BLAMED

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two state agencies, on one of the smoggiest days in Los Angeles, Friday filed a lawsuit charging three major oil companies with using polluting substances in their gasoline in order to make more profit.

The suit, filed in Superior Court by the state Air Resources Board and the Attorney General's office, names Gulf, Mobil and Powerine oil companies.

ARB Chairman Tom Quinn said thousands of major smog law violations were noted in the suit, which seeks $500 in civil fines for each violation and could add up to a total of $6 million.

He said also that the motorist ends up with less gas than paid for because of the quick evaporation.

Mobil Oil Corp. denied the allegation and charged the ARB with being "more interested in grabbing headlines than in facing the facts."

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An orange layer of smog shrouded Los Angeles Friday and air quality control officials for the first time invoked mandatory rules on businesses and industry to reduce air pollutants.

It was the first time the South Coast Air Quality Management District predicted second stage smog levels in advance, automatically activating the emergency plan.

Restrictions ranged from prohibiting the unloading of oil from ships in Los Angeles Harbor to forcing some industries to cut back production by 20 percent and closing parking lots of large businesses to employees who fail to car pool.

The regional district said the orders would remain in effect at least through today as the heavy layer of smog, accompanied by temperatures near 100, enveloped the area.

"The smog condition is the worst in recent memory," Birakos said.

He said the district would issue about 40 notices of violation, including ones to Union Oil Co. and Arco for continuing to unload oil at the Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor complex.

The largest violators were businesses with more than 100 employees that ignored a request to encourage car pooling by posting notices in parking lots warning that employees driving by themselves could not park there.

Many other businesses, however, were quick to comply to the emergency rules, including Southern California Edison Co., the largest supplier of energy in Southern California, and the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power. Both switched from oil-fired operations to clean-burning natural gas.

Under voluntary provisions of the Emergency Episode Plan, residents of the sprawling Los Angeles basin were asked to reduce home electrical use and avoid unnecessary driving. Persons with respiratory problems or heart conditions were advised to stay indoors and avoid physical exertion.

It was mandatory that all industries producing hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen — the two basic ingredients of photochemical smog — cut operations by 20 percent.

Deadly Volcano Erupting

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Krakatoa volcano, which 95 years ago caused the biggest explosion in recorded history and killed 36,000 people, now is erupting at 10-minute intervals.

The manager of a beach hotel near Labuhan said the eruptions, which began on Wednesday, "are coming in ever shorter intervals, at present at a rate of about one every 10 minutes." A thick cloud of smoke is hanging over the islands, he added.

In August 1883, about most of the main island of Krakatoa disappeared in an eruption which scientists believe released more energy than a hydrogen bomb. The explosion was heard 4,800 kilometres away and caused huge tidal waves that killed persons as far away as Sri Lanka, then known as Ceylon.

The present eruptions come from a small volcanic island called Anak (the child of) Krakatoa which emerged from the sea 44 years after the catastrophe and is now about 120 metres high.

BURN TOLL 144

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — The health ministry announced four more burn victims died Friday in Spanish hospitals, bringing to 144 the official death toll in the gas explosion at a camping site on the Mediterranean coast Tuesday.

It said 72 victims remained in Spanish hospitals, and about one-half had burns over more than 90 per cent of their bodies and are near death. Their nationalities were not given.

Most of the victims at the Los Alfaques camp were European tourists. No North Americans are known to be involved in the tragedy that occurred when a truck loaded with propylene gas veered off a highway, caught fire and exploded, touching off a series of other explosions in vehicles at the camp crowded with vacationers.

BIZARRE ACCIDENT KILLS GIRL

LONDON (AP) — A 19-year-old girl learning to drive was killed Friday when struck by a small object hurtling through the open car window.

Police at first thought the girl had been shot. But later, a police spokesman said: "We now believe it was nothing more sinister than a bizarre, million-to-one accident."

An autopsy revealed that the girl was struck in the head by a piece of metal flung up by an agricultural mower at work in a nearby farmers field.

Cancer Infects U.K. Cattle

LONDON (CP) — Some dairy cattle in Britain, mainly Holsteins, have been found infected with "an insidious form of blood cancer previously unknown here," an agriculture department spokesman said Friday.

The spokesman, as well as an official of the Canadian high commission, said that at this stage there is no proof that the disease came from Canada.

The disease, known as enzootic bovine leukosis, has been found in cattle imported from Canada but so far only Canadian cattle have been tested.

The spokesman said that of 635 cattle tested only 80 showed evidence of infection. Veterinarians still have to test more than 9,500 other cattle imported during the last 10 years from other countries.

Indians Reach Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Led by runners relaying a sacred unlit peace pipe wrapped in an Indian blanket, American Indians entered the U.S. capital today, climaxing their 2,700-mile "Longest Walk" to dramatize the Indians' plight.

The Indians are in Washington to protest what they say is backlash legislation in Congress aimed at taking away their reservations and natural resources. They plan a week of demonstrations and rallies expected to attract thousands of Indians and their supporters.

After a pep talk by comedian Dick Gregory at a park in suburban Maryland, about 1,600 Indians and supporters, running more than two hours behind schedule, crossed into the District of Columbia waving red, yellow, black and white banners.

March organizers said that boxer Muhammad Ali was there and would address a rally later in the day.

They said Ali earlier had brought some Indians up to his training camp in Pennsylvania and plans to fight a 10-round exhibition bout at a Capital Centre rally July 23.

The peace pipe carried at the head of the parade is regarded as a sacred object. It was filled by an Indian chief in San Francisco and has become the main rallying symbol of the march.

The Indians were greeted in Washington by congressional and local politicians, including Rep. Ronald Dellums (Dem—Calif., and District of Columbia Council members Douglas Moore and Marion Barry, who expressed solidarity with the Indians' cause. Moore and Barry were in African dress.

China, Vietnam Quarrel Grows

TOKYO (AP) — China has tightened entry controls on Chinese fleeing from Vietnam and has accused the Hanoi government of using the quarrel between the two countries to infiltrate spies and "other bad elements" into China.

Peking also said Vietnamese troops have fired shots to force frightened Chinese refugees to cross the frontier, causing "chaos along the whole length of the Sino-Vietnamese boundary." They share a frontier more than 1,000 kilometres long.

China's Hsinhua news agency reported Friday that Peking has imposed new security regulations to control the flow of refugees, who say they are suffering discrimination and harassment from Vietnamese authorities.

Would-be refugees now must secure proper exit papers from the Vietnamese as well as visas from Chinese consular officials in Vietnam before crossing the border, Hsinhua said.

Previously, refugees were fleeing across the frontier at any point they chose and without proper papers, Hsinhua said.

It said the new regulations were ordered to "foil the Vietnamese authorities" attempts to "sabotage" China's plans to relocate the refugees.

BULLETS FLY IN GOV'T OFFICE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He was blind and needed help finding the door to the immigration office. But once inside, Robert Corbett took out months of anger when he pulled a .22-calibre pistol and fired six shots before he was subdued, immigration officers said.

No one was hit by the shots, and officials who wrestled Corbett to the ground Friday suffered minor bruises. Corbett was not injured.

He was taken into custody by Los Angeles police, and was booked for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon. He was free on $1,000 bail.

Corbett, 40, was angry with U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials because they would not grant his French wife instant citizenship, immigration officials said. Immigration lawyer William Odencrantz said Corbett's wife must wait three years as required by law before she can be granted citizenship.

Corbett is legally blind, but is able to see blurred images of objects, Odencrantz said.

Late-Night Ferry Running Empty

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

If the late ferry experiment ended now it would have to be labelled a disaster — but it's not going to end now.

"We're going to give it every chance to succeed," B.C. Ferries traffic manager Ken Stratford said Friday.

"We're going to let as many people as possible know about this service. The experiment will continue, as scheduled, until Sept. 6."

In July the midnight sailing from Tsawwassen had an average load of 27 per cent capacity for vehicles and 14 per cent capacity for passengers.

There's worse. In order to make the midnight trip feasible, there is a 10:15 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay.

It doesn't sail empty — but almost. In July its average load was two per cent of capacity for vehicles and about one per cent for passengers.

The ferry on the late runs is the Queen of Tsawwassen. It is full-size but not a stretch ferry. When full it carries 138 cars and a maximum of 809 passengers.

On the midnight run it has been averaging 29 cars, one bus, two commercial vehicles and six campers; plus 114 passengers.

On the 10:15 p.m. run from Swartz Bay, the average load is two cars, one bus, 14 passengers, one-eleventh of a commercial vehicle and two-elevenths of a camper.

"Part of the problem is that people are not yet fully aware of the service, Stratford said."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice-president Bob Wheaton agrees there must be more publicity about the route if the experiment is to succeed.

The chamber will be publicizing both the 10:15 p.m. run and the midnight sailing.

"This service is of particular interest to businessmen and we will be doing what we can to publicize it in the business community."

Meanwhile, Stratford said B.C. Ferries Corp. has contacted major sport organizations in Vancouver, including the B.C. Lions and the Whitecaps, so they can organize fan bus trips to the games.

"They can easily make the midnight sailing after the game."

H-Program Test Limit Five Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's compulsory heroin treatment program will be abandoned after five years if it does not work, Health Minister Bob McClelland says in an article in the Journal of the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario.

"I don't intend to pour money down a bottomless hole," he said. "We'll admit failure if we fail, but I don't think we will.

"We consider this to be a five-year demonstration project, and if we find out at the end of that time that the program isn't working, we'll scrap it and do something different."

Under the Heroin Treatment Act, given third reading last month, addicts can be committed to a three-year treatment program including, in some cases, six month terms of incarceration in a treatment facility.

U.S. TALKING TRADE-OFF

Times News Services

BONN — The United States is considering a swap involving Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky and two Soviet officials being held in the United States on charges of espionage, administration officials said today.

To emphasize U.S. opposition to the 13-year sentence imposed on Shcharansky for allegedly spying for the United States, the administration is also considering economic sanctions against the Soviet Union, the officials said.

U.S. officials said negotiations were in a "delicate state" and no details could be divulged.

Soviet officials in Geneva had told newsmen the Kremlin was interested in securing the release of two U.N. employees of Soviet nationality who are being held in New Jersey on spying charges.

President Carter, in West Germany for an seven-state economic conference, denounced the prosecution of dissidents. He linked the future of U.S.-Soviet detente to Moscow's respect for human rights.

He said the sentence given to Shcharansky has produced a "sadness the whole world feels."

In the U.S. Congress, there were calls for assorted responses, ranging from trade sanctions against the Soviet Union to U.S. withdrawal from the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Various human rights groups also reacted bitterly, while Communist parties in Britain and Italy denounced the Soviets' trials of dissidents. Switzerland offered blanket asylum to convicted Soviet activists.

But along with the wave of revulsion expressed by one group after another was a sense of frustration that not much could be done to alter the Soviet Union's treatment of its critics and political dissenters.

The human dimension of the plight of Shcharansky, 30, a computer expert sentenced to 13 years at hard labor, was dramatized by his wife, Avital, moments after she landed at Dulles Airport.

When she learned of the sentence just after her arrival on a flight from Paris, she nearly burst into tears.

"Thirteen years in the Russian jails is much too much to expect," she said. "Fifteen days can kill a person. And even 15 days is too much for a prisoner who is not guilty."

And members of Shcharansky's family were pledged to continue fighting and protesting, his brother-in-law said Friday after hearing of the sentence to 13 years in prison.

CARTER GIVES BERLIN PLEDGE

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Welcomed by thousands of Berliners, President Carter peered today across a freshly-painted section of the Communist-built wall that divides this city after declaring that "no matter what happens, Berlin will stay free."

Carter stood on a temporary platform looking through binoculars at a no-man's land of tank traps, barbed wire and guardhouses. The point where he stood normally is daubed on its western side with political slogans and other graffiti.

West Berliners said Easterners climbed over it Friday night and, remaining in a section of East Berlin territory that extends several feet beyond the wall toward the west, painted the ugly barrier a cool, clean white for about 50 metres yards in each direction.

The president said of the action: "I don't think anything can hide the basic deprivation of human rights exemplified by the wall."

Carter came close to echoing John F. Kennedy, who 15 years ago electrified a vast throng in front of West Berlin's city hall by shouting, "Ich bin ein Berliner" — I am a Berliner.

Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt started a day of jet-hopping in Bonn, flew to Frankfurt, visited nearby Wiesbaden, and then flew here, parallelling the route taken by Kennedy.

In his text for a speech to before West German and American troops at Wiesbaden, Carter said:

"You are the point of the Western sword. That sword is sharp and true, and the people and government of the United States are striving to keep it that way."

Carter also told a hand-picked audience of Berliners today that the United States would consider an attack on Western Europe the same as an attack on the United States itself:

"We do have an adequate defence and it is increasing," he told the town hall meeting broadcast live to the U.S.

"We consider an attack on the German people or Western European territory exactly the same as an attack on the people or territory of the United States."

Salmon Halt Begins

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fishermen belonging to the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union have been asked to stop fishing in preparation for a strike by 4,000 shoreworkers at noon Sunday.

The fishermen were to stop fishing at midnight Friday.

The decision to close down the industry comes at the peak of the salmon season and UFAWU secretary-treasurer George Hewison said Friday that a strike will cost the industry about $20 million a week.

He announced that the shoreworkers, also members of the UFAWU, rejected the latest Fisheries Association of British Columbia wage offer by a 82-per-cent margin during a series of meetings at points along the coast. Earlier they had voted 75 per cent in favor of a strike.

"I've never seen a year like this," Hewison said. "We've had no fewer than 10 study sessions in the last week."

Hewison said 900 workers at Port Edwards near Prince Rupert were already off the job.

"We're having trouble keeping our people on the job until the deadline Sunday."

He pledged that all "fair-caught" fish delivered before noon Sunday will be processed by the shoreworkers before they strike.

About 600 tendermen, who work on the packing ships, are already in port, either Vancouver or Prince Rupert, to vote on the industry's wage offer. The union urged the members to reject the proposed $6.78-a-day increase in wages.

Hewision said the shoreworker strike will be called off if the companies come up with "an acceptable offer." The shoreworkers have been offered a 55-cent-an-hour increase on rates of $6.72 at base, $7.37 for production workers in canneries, $7.59 in cold storage plants and $8.89 for tradesmen.

The union is seeking a $12.50-a-day increase for tendermen and a 85-cent-an-hour increase for the shoreworkers. The companies' offers amount to about 7.5 per cent over one year.

PIPELINE FOR BEER?

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Tavern owner John Hall has a plan to help relieve the beer shortage in British Columbia, where drinkers are drier than usual during the second month of a strike-lockout in the brewery industry.

Hall, who runs the Salty Dog Tavern here, has suggested building a refrigerated beer pipeline from Port Angeles to Milwaukee, Wis., one of the centres of the United States brewing industry.

Hall is active in a group to keep a similar pipeline proposal—but for oil not beer—from being built. The oil pipeline is being proposed by Northern Tier Pipeline Co.

The tavern owner wants to call his project the Northern Beer Pipeline. He said it would terminate in Port Angeles, where a keg farm and suds port would be constructed.

At the suds port, the brew would be loaded aboard super tankards—noted for their deep draft—and hauled to British Columbia.

Hall said environmentalists are complaining about his heady idea, fearing that no one would report beer spills. He said, however, says there is no cause for worry because spills would not damage marine life except, perhaps, for a few pickled herrings.

Stop: It's Good French

MONTREAL (CP) — The Office de la Langue Francaise, responsible for promoting the use of French in the province, says Quebec's 215,000 bilingual "stop-arret" signs should become just plain old stop signs.

And although it may come as news to English-speaking Quebecers and tourists, it's all in the interest of preserving the purity of the French language.

After some linguistic investigation, the language office says stop is good French while arret, used as a verb in the imperative, is bad grammar.

Although both terms are "acceptable," spokesman Lise Trudel said Friday, stop is used worldwide and is more correct.

As early as 1878, she noted, the Dictionnaire de la Langue Francaise listed the verb stopper as meaning "to command one to stop."

Transport Minister Lucien Lessard has yet to rule whether "stop," "arret," "stop-arret," or just a red octagon with a hand gesturing halt, should adorn Quebec highways.

Lessard's verdict will directly affect 15,000 signs on 40,000 miles of provincial highways, but municipalities, which also erect the signs, would be encouraged to follow suit.

Pregnancy No Excuse - Vander Z

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday he will overturn an arbitration board ruling that allowed two 17-year-old pregnant girls in Kelowna to collect welfare.

Vander Zalm said in an interview that pregnancy is no excuse to be excluded from his ministry's recently-formulated regulations making it more difficult for persons aged 16 to 18 to receive social assistance.

The minister said if he allowed the board's ruling to stand it would become a precedent.

The board said Thursday the girls were entitled to social assistance in spite of the Vander Zalm's edict that such teen-agers should only be allowed welfare in emergency situations.

Vander Zalm said his decision may sound harsh, but the intent of the new regulations must be enforced.

Guerrillas Slay 17 Villagers

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Black nationalist guerrillas burned an entire village to the ground Friday, killing 17 of the 22 residents, including three babies, a Rhodesian military communique said today.

Guerrillas shot five villagers and then herded another 17 into a hut before riddling it with bullets. Twelve of those in the hut were killed, the military command said.

One survivor was hospitalized in critical condition, a military spokesman said.

It was the third mass killing of civilians blamed on guerrillas in the past three weeks.

Chirau's large family, including his three wives, live in the Zwimba reservation in a fortified brick compound defended by black militiamen.

Two black Rhodesian guerrilla armies are fighting a six-year-old war to unseat the government, which comprises black and white leaders who reached a constitutional settlement four months ago promising majority rule by the beginning of next year. Guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe were excluded from the agreement and have pledged to step up the war.

Charlottes 'Hotspot' Of Public Opinion

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The B.C. ministry of forests has been advised to dispatch a special study team to the Queen Charlotte Islands to head off a public uproar that could become bigger than the spruce budworm controversy.

A specially-commissioned report that deals with the ministry's communications problems warns that the situation now developing on the Charlottes — apparently concerning the South Moresby Island wilderness proposal — could lead to a public outcry unless the ministry acts fast.

The ministry is faced with the difficult task of approving cutting plans for tree farm licences which now exist in the unique South Moresby Island area. Numerous groups are calling for the preservation of the area.

The report, which reviews the ministry's communications program from top to bottom and recommends a spate of changes, says the Charlottes deserve special attention.

It recommends that a commission of inquiry be dispatched to the Islands to investigate the situation, meet with special interest groups, take the testimony of experts and propose a public participation program.

"The ministry is not dealing with the situation on the Islands, which shows every sign of developing in a cause celebre. In the opinion of this report, the Queen Charlottes is worthy of special study because it could become the biggest single public relations crisis this ministry has ever faced."

The report, compiled by a Victoria-based marketing and communications firm, indicates ministry officials have a lack of respect for its critics on the Charlottes stating that "personnel refer to the opposition as hippies and even draft-dodgers. Remarked one: 'If they couldn't deal with their problems in the U.S., why should we deal with them up here?' "

The report cautions ministry officials that people on the Charlottes are not always what they seem.

"The Queen Charlottes have attracted many dissatisfied but articulate young people. As one person remarked, 'You can never tell who you are talking to. The long-haired guy sitting opposite you may turn out to be a nuclear physicist.' "

The report warns that the ministry can get itself into trouble on the Charlottes because the issue is becoming of interest throughout the province.
